Sen. George McGovern and Fidel Castro, tour guide

White House accepts Castro's peace overtures

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an apparent breakthrough in a 14-year-old hemispheric cold war, the White House Thursday accepted what appeared to be overtures toward reconciliation by Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Castro "seems to have accepted what the White House has referred to as the mutuality of obligation in improving relations between Cuba and the United States."

His remarks were based on news reports from Havana quoting Castro at a news conference as saying, "We wish for the people of the United States a wish of friendship," plus indicating during a talk with visiting U.S. Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a willingness to consider returning a $2 million ransom from a hijacked U.S. plane plus possible release of nine U.S. political prisoners in Havana.

"The United States has said we see no future in perpetual antagonism" toward Cuba, Nessen told reporters when asked about Castro's remarks. "The White House is aware of reports on that and notes that he seems to have accepted what the White House has referred to in the past as the mutuality of obligations," Nessen said.

That phrase was most recently used by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in a speech in Houston last month.

"We have taken some symbolic steps to indicate that we are prepared to move in a new direction if Cuba will," he said then. "Fundamental change cannot come, however, unless Cuba demonstrates a readiness to assume the mutuality of obligation and regard upon which a new relationship must be founded."

Nessen said the State Department is prepared to discuss Castro's requests for "medicines. The spokesman said he is "not announcing a change in U.S. policy toward Cuba," and noted that a number of significant differences remain between the two countries.

Nevertheless, veteran White House observers noted in his remarks a definite softening of the U.S. position toward Cuba.

The Organization of American States, which would have to vote an end to the trade embargo it imposed in 1964, is meeting in Washington this week but earlier decided against calling up the question of Cuban sanctions at this meeting.

It was not immediately known if the new developments might bring about a change in that decision.

Ford was to host a reception for the OAS General Assembly delegates Saturday evening at the White House.

First legal numbers lottery to be held in New Jersey

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — The nation's first legal numbers lottery—designed to compete with the illegal operations run by the mob—will begin May 22 in New Jersey on a six-month trial basis, Gov. Brendan T. Byrne announced Thursday.

Lottery gamblers will have the opportunity to bet their favorite numbers with the state, just as they now do when they place an illegal bet based on a hunch, a dream, a birthdate or some other sign of luck.

In New York, state and city officials also were reported considering a numbers-type lottery.

Law enforcement officials who are skeptical of impact the state's game will have on the rackets pointed out the illegal lottery is different in several respects. Numbers runners often make daily rounds to collect bets from their regular customers, while legal gamblers must visit one of the 350 machines operated by the state Lottery Commission.

Also, the state will charge a minimum of 50 cents. Most streetcorner operations start at 25 cents, and a few still cost a dime.

The state won't give the credit that numbers runners extend to heavy gamblers.

And—most important—legal winnings will be taxable.

The state-run numbers game is the latest in a series of gimmicks the commission has come up with in recent years to bolster sagging revenues. Once hailed as a major revenue source for New Jersey, the regular state lottery is expected to net only $38 million this fiscal year.

Former State Police Chief David B. Kelly said last year at a public hearing that a "conservative" estimate of the illegal take from all gambling in New Jersey is more than $1 billion.

Byrne said that the state's numbers game will be called "Pick-it."

The system was designed by former Lottery Executive Director Charles C. Carella, who, ironically, is a former prosecutor in Essex County where he specialized in fighting organized crime.

Byrne said the legal numbers "will give the lottery, for the first time, the realistic potential to compete with the illegal numbers racket."

Pa. unemployment jumps to 9.4 per cent in April

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Unemployment jumped to 9.4 per cent in April as seasonal jobs in the construction and resort industry failed to materialize in Pennsylvania.

Labor and Industry Secretary Paul J. Smith announced the figure Thursday. He also said the federal government has ordered the state to change the way it computes unemployment.

The revision means a decrease in all the unemployment

Saigon evacuation criticized

SAIGON (UPI) May 5 (Delayed)—Since the last helicopter carried the last U.S. Marine guard out of Saigon early Wednesday morning April 30, there has been growing criticism of the haste and apparent excitement of the evacuation.

Left behind were other Americans, foreign diplomats and uncounted hundreds of Vietnamese employees they had promised to take with them.

"The Americans could not even leave Saigon with class," said one foreigner who remained behind.

The South Korean Embassy charged affairs stopped trying to get into the U.S. Embassy when a Marine guard hit him in chest with a tear gas grenade. He went into hiding afterwards.

Americans working at the U.S. Information Service went secretly and separately to the embassy then telephoned their offices to tell Vietnamese who volunteered to stay until the last moment to try to get to an evacuation point.

American prisoners were left in the Saigon prison and were in Saigon when the Viet Cong opened the jail hours after the final U.S. helicopter had left.

Those involved in the operation said there was sniper fire at the embassy compound and antiaircraft fire at the U.S. helicopters.

But those who stayed or were

An American woman who was in the embassy trying to help a group of 15 Vietnamese leave said she heard one explosion which Marines told her was a hand grenade.

"That explosion was quite a way from the embassy and there was no other shooting or explosion I heard," she said.

A senior U.S. Embassy official told the woman the front gate of the embassy was not safe and he left. The woman stayed for another hour before walking back to downtown Saigon.

Interviews with persons of different nationalities who were at the embassy that evening—the most tense time of the evacuation—said there was no panic and no shooting in the area.

UPI reporter Chad Huntley drove to the embassy about 7 p.m. He said about 300 persons, mostly Vietnamese, were pressed against the gate asking to be included in the evacuation.

"There was absolutely no panic, no mob action," Huntley said.

"When I walked up to the gate, the people cleared a path for me."

Huntley said the claims of U.S. Marines that 10,000 persons were besieging the embassy were untrue.

A UPI newsman telephoned USIS official Alan Carter at the embassy to say his secretary was at the downtown office. Carter said he would telephone back but never did.

Many of the employees, who ranged from young secretaries to retired guards, were terrified when they discovered they could not get out.

"Mr. Carter told me he would be sure to get me out because if I did not get out, the Viet Cong will cut off my head," said the trembling secretary at the UPI bureau.

Many of their families were fearful of taking the local employees back into their homes because they believed the tales of instant reprisal. But most now walk the streets of Saigon with no fear.

"The Americans only lied to me once in eight years I worked for them," said one. "I am not really angry at them but I am very disappointed."

language in the bill that would authorize "such sums as may be necessary" for handling the refugees.

Committee sources said the bill could be taken up by the full House by next Wednesday.

The full committee approved by voice vote an amendment by Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., that would require the President to keep the House Judiciary Committee and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee "currently informed of the use of funds and the exercise of functions authorized in this act."

Even before the Judiciary panel acted to authorize the refugee aid, a House appropriations subcommittee voted $405 million to fund it—a figure representing a reduction from Ford's figure because the estimated number of refugees now is lower than when he made his request.

Shapp may seek presidential nod

SHARON, Pa. (UPI) — Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp says he may run for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976.

"I am giving serious consideration to it for one important reason," Shapp said Wednesday night. "I think the most important issue facing the United States today is the economy. We have 10 per cent of our people officially unemployed, and millions more semi-employed or not working at all."

"There is something wrong with the economy of this nation and the way that we're headed. And I don't hear any of the candidates, either Mr. Ford or the Democratic candidates, speaking out on positive programs...to get this country back on mainstream."

"I may very well throw my hat in the ring to run for the presidency on the basis that it is time to start talking in this fashion."

Shapp's remarks were made in reply to a question at a news conference. He was here to address an annual dinner of the Mercer County Association for the Retarded.

Shapp, 62, first ran for governor of Pennsylvania in 1966 in his first try at a political office. He lost the general election to Republican Raymond P. Shafer.

Panel finishes work on energy tax bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee tentatively completed work on an energy tax bill Thursday evening after adopting an oil import quota system intended to sharply reduce America's dependence on foreign oil in coming years.

The committee voted 20-16 to move the bill the next step along toward House consideration. The vote, a procedural move to resubmit a bill containing all the amendments already written by the committee, was tantamount to approval of the package.

The bill would raise gasoline taxes, tax cars on their gasoline mileage, and limit imports of oil and petroleum products.

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., called the bill "a good, sound bill, one that we can carry on the floor of the Congress."

But Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, called the bill "a light touch, a cream puff bill, but at least it gives a first awareness of conservation of fuels."

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., said the trouble is, Americans are not exerting pressure for such legislation.

"A constituent put it perfectly when he said, 'the country does not believe the patient is so sick and does not trust the doctor with the cure,'" Jones said. "This is a stripped-down bill, but at least it sets the stage for conservation-consciousness."

The bill was estimated by the committee staff to result in a fuel savings equivalent to 2.1 million barrels a day of oil by 1985, to enable dependence on imports to be cut nearly in half by that time, and to bring a net increase in revenue of $7.8 billion by 1980.

One last big fight remains for the bill. Republicans, led by Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., want a profits control provision, as a standby if Congress passes a bill lifting controls on oil prices. Conable tried unsuccessfully to get that provision in the bill Thursday night, but was rebuffed by Ullman.

Plutonium ban urged for utilities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reversing a staff decision by the now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Thursday plutonium should be banned as a fuel in electric power generation until adequate safeguards are developed.

NRC officials predicted their recommendation could cause a delay of up to three years in the original AEC timetable for approving plutonium as a supplement to the uranium fuel now used in atomic reactors producing electricity.

The new recommendation drew immediate sharp criticism from the Atomic Industrial Forum, an industry group, which called it "ironic and deplorable."

Plutonium, the stuff from which hydrogen bombs are made, is one of the waste byproducts produced by uranium-burning reactors. It is considered one of the deadliest materials on earth, with even microscopic particles shown in lab tests to be capable of inducing cancer in animals.

There have been proposals that plutonium be extracted from reactor wastes and recycled as an additive that could stretch America's uranium supplies.

Big Earl drowns sorrow

Big Earl no pearl on suds circuit

WINSTED, Conn. (UPI) — The law says you can't bring a pig into a barroom in Connecticut and that includes 500-pound Big Earl, whose farmer-owner says he can belly up to the bar, guzzle a couple of brews and then eat the cans.

But the boys at the Freight House Cafe won't be seeing Big Earl. The police closed his act.

Dennis J. DeLisle, part owner of the bar located in a former railroad freight house, said his partners thought it might be a good idea to give local talent a break and booked Big Earl for a Wednesday night debut.

Farmer Clifford Crossman was a little disappointed with the cancellation. He was all set to take Big Earl to a car wash before the show. The regulars were looking forward to the performance and the management even rigged a barricade on the dance floor to keep Big Earl's fans back but there was a squealer among them.

A phone call to the local police from a concerned woman began inquiries into the legality of the porker's performance.

Police Sgt. Francis O'Neill said the woman caller was "pretty upset. She told me something or someone was going to eat a live chicken" at the cafe and "her son was going to see it."

DeLisle said Big Earl was just going to have a couple of pops of hops.

O'Neill informed DeLisle it was against the law to bring a pig into a barroom and referred the case to the State Liquor Commission.

DeLisle said liquor inspector Charles F. Holland phoned him.

"You got a permit for live entertainment?" asked Holland.

"I told him I had a permit for a band," said DeLisle.

"Is the pig going to whistle?" Holland asked.

DeLisle didn't know for sure but was told he didn't have a permit "for that type of entertainment." And that was it for Big Earl and show biz.

What's news

Doctors' strike spreads

SAN FRANCISCO — The anesthesiologists' strike that has ended most surgery in the San Francisco area threatened Thursday to spread swiftly to all major population areas of California. Sacramento's 60 anesthesiologists planned to hang up their white coats today, and San Jose's 70 said they would quit work Monday. A meeting to decide a strike was scheduled in San Diego, and angry talk of a strike burst from Los Angeles 500 of the specialists. The anger was ignited by news that Travelers Corp., a major carrier of malpractice insurance in California, may raise its premiums for the specialists from 400 to 600 per cent, effective Nov. 1.

Some dream!

CONNELLSVILLE — A woman wearing only a nightgown was taken from the cold waters of the Youghiogheny River Thursday after she swam and floated to the community of Dawson, about four miles away. Grace Crawford, 56, Conneltsville, told State Police she had a bad dream and must have walked into the water in 40 degree temperature. She said she could not remember anything until she was picked up by volunteer firemen in a boat near Dawson. She was spotted by a man while she was near the shore. When he called to her and started toward her, she swam into midstream. The woman was treated and released at Frick Memorial Hospital in Mount Pleasant.

Food price gain predicted

WASHINGTON — Retail food prices for the full year 1975 may be held to a six to eight per cent gain over 1974 if farmers get good crops this summer, the Agriculture Department said Thursday. In fact, the department said, good harvests could mean some declines in food prices later in the year after modest gains expected this summer. The forecast followed two straight years of food price increases averaging about 14.5 per cent a year. The agency predicted a two per cent increase in average food prices during the first quarter of 1975 will be followed by a "moderate" one-two per cent increase in the April-June second quarter.

HHH campaign aid convicted

NEW YORK — The former campaign manager for Sen. Humbert H. Humphrey, Jack L. Chestnut, Thursday was convicted of willfully soliciting and accepting an illegal corporate contribution from a dairyman's cooperative during the senator's 1970 campaign. Neither Chestnut, a 42-year-old Minneapolis lawyer, nor his wife, Karen, who was present in court throughout the trial, showed any emotion at the verdict. A jury of nine women and three men found Chestnut guilty of soliciting and accepting a $12,000 corporate contribution in June 1970 from the Associated Milk Producers, Inc., based in San Antonio, Texas. He was also accused of attempting to conceal the contribution by making it payable to the New York advertising firm of Lennen & Newell, now defunct. The firm handled Humphrey's publicity in the 1970 campaign as well as in 1968 when the Minnesota Democrat ran unsuccessfully for President.

Ford reassures allies

WASHINGTON — President Ford affirmed U.S. military support of South Korea Thursday in his campaign to reassure Asian friends and allies in the aftermath of Vietnam. Ford unveiled the new face of U.S.-Asian policy in White House meetings with visiting South Korean officials led by House Speaker Chong Il-Kwon, and to Singapore's Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew. He gave the same assurances Wednesday to the visiting Prime Ministers of Australia and New Zealand. "The President took the opportunity of Speaker Chong's visit to reassure South Korea of the solidity of our security commitment to South Korea," Press Secretary Ron Nessen told reporters.

Rails suffer historic loss

WASHINGTON — The railroad industry suffered the first quarterly operating deficit in its history during the first three months of this year, the Association of American Railroads said Thursday. The $93.5 million deficit in net railway operating income dramatized the effects of both recession and inflation on the industry. The industry also reported a $151 billion deficit in ordinary income, the largest such deficit since 1938. Net railway operating income includes only income, expense, taxes and rents from actual railroad operations while ordinary income also includes non-railroad income and fixed charges such as interest.

Henry's bags packed

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has scheduled a meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on May 19 in either Geneva or Vienna, administration sources said Thursday. The session will take place during Kissinger's forthcoming trip to attend various meetings in Western Europe this month prior to joining President Ford at the May 28-30 NATO summit meeting in Brussels. The Kissinger-Gromyko session will be concerned, officials said, with the exploration by President Ford and the secretary of the possibilities of United States' peacemaking in the Middle East.

State education official defends attitude program

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Donald M. Carroll, Jr., Pennsylvania commissioner of basic education, went to the defense Thursday of the state's program to measure the attitudes, feelings and values of students in the public schools.

"Attitudes about self, school and the world...are important in how children learn and react," Carroll said. "It is disturbing that Pennsylvania's Educational Quality Assessment program is under attack at this late date. It is imperative that we recognize the direct, positive correlation between basic skills and attitudes."

The state Department of Education's assessment program, dubbed EQA, has come under fire primarily from the Pennsylvania Coalition for Basic Education, Pittsburgh, and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Coalition President Mrs. Joan Janaro has denounced the 10 goals of education set by the State Board of Education and the EQA tests designed to evaluate the goals.

"We're not opposed to the 10 goals as human goals, but we don't think they're good goals for public education," Mrs. Janaro said.

"Only one of the 10 deals with education. The other nine are attitudinal."

"And out of the 422 questions on the EQA test to measure how a school is doing on meeting those goals, all but 60 question children about attitudes towards self, others, personal behavior, citizenship and test personal behavior in situations of conflict or stress."

Mrs. Janaro said the coalition believes most of the test questions add up to an invasion of privacy.

"They involve an invasion of a child's psychological privacy of self and of his rights to his own thoughts."

Sample questions include: I do not like myself very much, I feel I'm not as nice-looking as most people, and I don't get much attention at home, with a choice of answers very untrue, mostly untrue, mostly true and very true.

Mrs. Janaro said the state Education Department already has developed a program on citizenship at the Allegheny Intermediate Unit for mandatory use by school districts with low EQA scores on citizenship. Carroll said the state Board of Education was directed by the legislature in 1963 to measure the adequacy of educational programs and provide each district comparative data.

A survey of Vietnamese at Pendleton showed that many were attracted to the sunny, subtropical climates of Southern California, which could present a problem to recession-ridden areas.

In San Diego, county welfare authorities said 28 Vietnamese refugees, in-laws of American citizens, have applied for welfare.

At Camp Pendleton, the huge Marine base stretching along the Pacific in Southern California, facilities were becoming stretched to the limit.

With a capacity of 18,000 persons in Quonset huts and more than 1,000 in hastily erected tents, "Little Saigon" housed 16,137 refugees, with 1,594 more expected Thursday.

In a separate camp were 667 Cambodians. Another 400 or so were on the way.

"We'll have to stop when we reach capacity," said Marine Lt. Col Arthur Brill. "The pipeline will have to slow down."

At Ft. Chaffee were 7,803 refugees, with 2,203 expected Thursday.

At Eglin, the smallest of the camps there were 628 refugees, with more expected today.

Temporary camps on Guam and Wake Island were packed. About 18,000 Vietnamese—most of them navy men and their families—left Subic Bay in the Philippines early Thursday.

The last of the known refugees heading for America—about 9,000 of them—waited to be processed at Subic Bay.

In Washington, where Congress continued to wrangle over aid to the refugees, the Senate overwhelmingly approved a "Good Samaritan" resolution that "welcomes warmly the latest exiles to our shores." A House subcommittee worked on a resettlement financing bill of $805 million—far more than the $507 million President Ford requested.

But other legislators showed no such magnanimity on the refugee issue, urging limitations on resettlement spending and arguing that generosity should begin at home with matching aid for America's homeless and unemployed.

For many American families wishing to help, the attempts were often frustrating.

The government resettlement office set up a toll-free number —800-368-1180—to field offers of sponsorship, jobs and money. The 16 lines were jammed with calls and more lines were being installed Thursday.

For the last three days,

Anthony J. Leone and his wife, Audrey, of Mt. Vernon, N.Y., have been calling that number to offer help to some young Vietnamese woman.

"It's always busy," said Leone, an executive for a metallurgy firm. "But we just thought the other night, 'Wouldn't it be nice if we could take someone under our wing?'"

Our son is grown and there's just the two of us in a house with three bedrooms."

Hundreds of other Americans were successful in their attempts to aid the homeless.

Billy R. Brown, his wife and 10-month old daughter drove 380 miles from Monroe, La., to Ft. Chaffee to volunteer to sponsor at Vietnamese refugee.

Cambodia refugees detained

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (UPI) — The last 550 refugees from the French Embassy compound in Phnom Penh reached the border with Thailand Thursday, but not all of them were permitted to cross the frontier by Thai authorities.

About 230 French nationals in the truck convoy from Phnom Penh as well as between 100 and 200 persons of other nationalities crossed the frontier quickly and were brought to Bangkok. They included four American newsmen.

More than 100 others who claimed Pakistani nationality, however, were refused admission to Thailand and remained on the Cambodian side of the border under the control of Khmer Rouge military officials who had been anxious to remove them from the country.

Police officials at this border crossing point of Aranyaprathet said the group were Khmer Moslems whose claim of nationality had not been recognized by the Pakistani Embassy in Bangkok. The officials said they did not know when or if the refugees would enter Thailand.

Many of the Moslems had been brought to the French embassy in Phnom Penh shortly before the departure of the last convoy by the Khmer Rouge as part of their apparent policy to remove all foreign influence from the country.

The refugees who entered Thailand Thursday all appeared in good health except for a baby who was the first to cross the border in the arms of its mother, a doctor holding a bottle of intravenous solution connected to the child's arm walking at her side.

The infant was hospitalized at the border. French Embassy officials said that two other persons were hospitalized after reaching Bangkok but they were not reported seriously ill.

In all, 1,511 refugees left Cambodia in two truck convoys organized by the Khmer Rouge after they refused to allow flights into Phnom Penh to bring them out. Most of the refugees had been interned at the embassy since the fall of Phnom Penh April 17.

Boston's school problems revived by demonstration

BOSTON (UPI) — State and local police broke up a demonstration by 500 white students and local residents at South Boston High School Thursday as black students arrived in buses for morning classes.

About 270 police, five on horseback and 36 riding motorcycles, pushed the demonstrators back a block down the street and cleared a path for the black students who drove up in yellow buses to enter the building.

There were no arrests or injuries.

Violence broke out in the schools and streets of Boston last fall during implementation of the initial stages of a federal court order to integrate the city's public school system by busing. U.S. District Judge Arthur W. Garrity is expected to hand down soon a plan for the second phase of the busing to begin in September.

About 30 young persons demonstrated during the lunch hour Thursday in front of the downtown Boston School Committee offices. Several blacks were in the crowd, which chanted: "Who's got the money. Who makes the rules. Kids can't learn in racist schools." About 60 spectators stood by quietly.

Leaflets reading "Keep the Communists out of our schools and our kids out of court" were distributed Wednesday night by South Boston white students.

Anti-busing groups interrupted a speech by Mayor Kevin H. White in Boston for 20 minutes.

Police Supt. Joseph A. Jordan said the Thursday morning demonstration at South Boston High was linked to an incident Wednesday when a black student unfurled the flag of the leftist Progressive Labor Party in the school.

Reward offered for killers of priest, nun, helper

EDGARD, La. (UPI) — Parish authorities offered a $2,000 cash reward Thursday for information leading to the arrest of two men who killed the pastor of St. John the Baptist Catholic Church, a nun and the rectory housekeeper and stole $600 in parishioners' donations.

St. Charles Parish Sheriff Lester J. Millet Jr. said no arrests had yet been made. Parish officers worked with crime lab experts and FBI agents in hopes of finding the killers of the Rev. Alcide Clement, 47; housekeeper Leah Lejeune, 58, and Sister Mary Patrick Harrington.

The Archdiocese of New Orleans announced a joint wake today for the priest and nun in the century-old Romanesque church next door to the rectory where they died Wednesday.

Members of the community expressed shock and disbelief at the murders in the Cajun village.

"Naturally we were shocked," said Judge C. William Dradley. "We're predominantly Catholic here and just about everybody knew Clement."

Tunkhannock denies raceway tax relief

LONG POND — The four per cent amusement tax imposed by Tunkhannock Township will not be reduced despite a request from Pocono International Raceway officials for a two per cent reduction.

Supervisors agreed revenue received from the tax is needed for the construction of a maintenance building.

Joe Geiser, assistant to Dr.

Joseph Mattioli, chairman of the raceway board of directors, told the supervisors and residents present at Wednesday's meeting "If you go along with the tax reduction now, in the long run it will help the township."

Geiser said he was making "a plea on behalf of the raceway in order to help it grow." He suggested the board for the time being "curtail plans for the proposed use of the money."

Residents strongly objected to reducing the tax, stating it was imperative a township building be constructed as soon as possible, also because there would be a possibility their real estate taxes would be increased in order to generate revenue created by the amusement tax reduction.

Geiser told the board he thought they should reconsider their decision and take into consideration the options open to the raceway.

"What will happen if the raceway takes a hard line and pursues through the legislature to be exempt from the tax, goes to court and wins," Geiser asked.

"Consider also what will happen to the township if the raceway board of directors pursue the option of forming its own borough. They know what is required to do this," he added.

"We want the people to take a different look at the raceway. We want to come to an agreement we can all live with," Geiser said.

"We want to pay our fair share," Geiser said. "We feel we've been gouged. Over the past four years we have put forth $250,000 to the township and what we have gotten back doesn't balance."

Residents told supervisors that if the amusement tax is reduced for the raceway, then they wanted their taxes reduced, too.

Supervisors held fast to their decision "for this year at least."

Mother Nature recognized

STROUDSBURG — This Sunday churches throughout Monroe County will be honoring one of the greatest mother's of all time — Mother Nature.

In celebration of Soil Stewardship Week, many clergymen will be honoring Mother Nature as well as the mothers in their congregations in both prayers and sermons.

The Monroe County Conservation District has elected the local theme of "Test of Strength" for the week-long observance, which is being recognized nationally, May 4 to May 11.

The district has circulated a "Test of Strength" booklet to clergymen stressing the need for conservation and orderly development of natural resources. It stresses that it is man's responsibility under God to protect and use wisely the gifts of soil, water and the other elements making up our environment.

The booklet is the 21st that has been issued to observe Soil Stewardship Week.

The theme "Test of Strength" was selected for two reasons. Firstly, according to Ralph Shupp, Monroe County chairman for Soil Stewardship Week, out of our nation's trying circumstances in the past we have gained strength.

This strength, according to Shupp, is one composed of the purposes and values we believe in, a spirit of tolerance and patience, the ability to set rational goals, and faith that God will guide the labors of men who serve him.

Times in the future will also test the strength of men, especially in relationship to our stewardship of the soil of Monroe County, according to the chairman.

Student funding divided

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA) began processing applications May 1 at a funding of $68.4 million rather than the $78 million the agency says it needs.

Maximum awards will continue to be awarded to veterans and to students whose family's major earner recently died.

Generally, students who enrolled in postsecondary study before April 1, 1973, will be considered for the maximum award and for the full academic year.

Also, more consideration will be given to family home equity and families with more than one student in postsecondary education.

Initially the agency will make only half-year awards rather than full-year awards to most students in the program.

Awards for the second half of the year will be adjusted later and will depend on whether the legislature approves more than the $68.4 million in the governor's budget.

Nearly all students will be required to file for assistance under the federally operated Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program.

The Pennsylvania maximum award will continue to be $1,200 for students in-state. Out-of-state awards will have a maximum of $600 except for veterans and renewal applicants who had awards prior to 1974-75, who may receive $800.

This year PHEAA spent $73 million in grants.

Planners meet

TANNERSVILLE — There will be a regular meeting of the Pocono Township Planning Commission on Monday, at 7:30 p.m., at the Municipal Building in Tannersville. The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Ordinance effective May 12

Tunkhannock votes new building regulation

LONG POND — Tunkhannock Township Supervisors Wednesday adopted a building permit ordinance to be effective May 12, repealing ordinances adopted in 1969 and 1970.

The newly adopted ordinance stipulates a permit must be obtained for the construction of any structure, placement of trailer or mobile home costing in excess of $1,000 and a permit must be prominently displayed on the property.

Excepting subdivisions or mobile parks, lot size cannot be less than 20,000 square feet or less than 100 feet frontage.

Sewerage disposal systems must conform with federal state and local laws. A sewerage permit must be obtained in addition to the building permit.

The building permit will be valid for two years and the structure must be completed, under roof, and closed within the time period.

The fee set is $15 and for any duplicate permit during the two-year period, $2.

After the ordinance was adopted, Clair Witt, township resident, asked the board to reconsider.

He felt persons being exempt from the first $1,000 of construction costs was not fair. He felt any structure to be used as a dwelling should require a permit.

The board agreed and instructed Lester Brown, township solicitor, to draft an amendment to the newly adopted ordinance to comply with Witt's request.

A motion was carried accepting amendments to the existing sewerage feasibility study as prepared by Glace and Glace of Harrisburg.

A special meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 21, to consider a proposed revision of the township's sewerage ordinance adopted in 1968.

The revision deals with new regulations set forth by the state Department of Environmental Resources (DER).

The ordinance will set a fee of $65 for a sewerage permit in order to defray salary for the newly appointed sewerage enforcement officer.

The board moved to appoint George Ewald township sewerage enforcement officer at a fee of $65.

Ewald was recently certified by DER. The township will receive $9,306 in revenue sharing for the period July 1 through June 30, 1976. The money was earmarked for public safety.

Eldred amends sewerage law

KUNKLETOWN — In a unanimous motion Wednesday night, the Eldred Township supervisors agreed to amend their current sewage permit ordinance and fix the new inspection fee at $65.

The $65 fee will include issuing the application and approval of the permit and percolation test, but will not include digging the appropriate test holes. The supervisors will also offer the option of paying $120 for all the work in one package with the exception of the digging of the backhoe hole.

Under the fee structure, $50 will be presented to inspector Kermit Borger at the time the application is applied for and the first site inspection is made. The township will hold back $15 of the permit fee until the system is finally approved or rejected. In the event that the system is not completed within two years, the remaining $15 will go to the township.

The fee for the repair of alternate systems was fixed at $10 for the first visit and $10 per trip after that time. Borger will also receive $6 an hour for work done on all subdivision modules.

A developer in the future, will have to make the appropriate deposit with the township secretary for the estimated amount of hours it will take to inspect the module. Borger will only be authorized to make the required site inspection, once the money has been deposited.

Any additional charges will be billed to the developer following the inspection.

Whether or not the property in the township is more than 10 acres, a percolation test must be made on the property before a sewage permit is issued.

According to the proposed ordinance, which is expected to be advertised for adoption sometime this month, all money for both module fees and permits will have to be paid in cash, certified check or money order.

In other business, the supervisors announced that their negotiations to purchase three acres of land from Larry Quigley fell through after the resident reportedly sold the property to another buyer.

The land sale was the subject of some controversy, because if the transfer of property has taken place, it could constitute an illegal subdivision. The supervisors are going to look into the situation.

At the present time, the supervisors said they have no other land available to purchase for a township building. If none other becomes available, they would have the option of condemning any property in the municipality for the public building.

The township received several copies of master maps from Hess Associates, which will be used for emergency services for residents once the township names its roads. The maps, prepared at a cost of $600, contain all the new subdivisions in the municipality.

This month, the supervisors are going to take steps to begin naming the roads. They are expected to receive a proposed list of names from the Progressive Women's Club for consideration at the board's June meeting.

P.M. choir to present concert

SWIFTWATER — The Pocono Mountain High Concert Choir and Chorale Ensemble will present a concert at 8 p.m. Friday in the William F. Nye Auditorium.

The Chorale Ensemble will present Hallelujah from the "Mount of Olives" by Haydn, "Achieved in the Glorious Work" by Beethoven, "Life is a Song Worth Singing," "Let It Be Me" and a Lennon-McCartney medley.

Among the selections to be presented by the Concert Choir are "Sunshine in My Soul," "Oliver," with solos by Colleen Zondag, and "Take Me Home Country Roads."

This year's program will also include two piano selections. Avon Doll Jr. and Susan Sacher will play Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and Margaret Davis will play Brahms' "Rhapsody No. 2 in G Minor."

Tickets may be obtained from choir and ensemble members or on the night of the concert.

Common Market battle Britain's war without roses

LONDON — Every English schoolboy, or so I am told, understands the War of the Roses. All most of us remember is that the houses of Lancaster and York fought each other for 30 years for control of the realm and in the end the prize went to the house of Tudor.

Pity now the English schoolboy trying to follow the intricacies of Britain's current political battle. What is going on is not just the traditional contest between the rival Labor and Conservative parties for the place of preference. It is rather a confused internecine war in which the barons of the Labor Party contest for mastery, and on which may hang the fate of the realm.

The immediate battleground is the European Economic Community, or Common Market, and the ostensible issue is whether Britain should stay in or get out. It may prove to be a decisive battle in a wider war.

Two separate Parliaments have voted for British participation in the market. Under a Conservative government Parliament voted to join. This spring under a Labor government Parliament voted to remain. So you might suppose the issue was settled. Not at all. This June the question will be put to the voters in an unprecedented national referendum.

Wilson, prime minister and leader of the Labor Party, is in favor of remaining. The Conservative Party is almost solidly in favor. So are most of the "establishment" institutions, such as the press, the majority of the academic community and all of the business and financial community. Yet for weeks now the country has been subjected to a campaign over the issue as bitter and as divisive as a civil war.

Thinking things over

Some of the opposition comes from the minor parties, such as the Scottish Nationalists. But the main opposition is from the militant labor unions, and the chief opposition spokesmen are drawn from the Labor government's own cabinet, led by Michael Foot, employment minister, and Tony Benn, the industry minister.

But there is more to this tangled tale. The Common Market battle, important as it is to the future of Britain, is only the outward and visible sign of a broader struggle within the Labor Party.

On the market issue Benn and his supporters can do battle with the prime minister because Wilson has been forced to allow the referendum, something unheard of in British politics, and to permit party members, including ministers, to dissent openly with himself and the majority of the cabinet. It offers, then, an opportunity to be seized by those who would challenge the prime minister for other reasons.

To a visitor Britain seems already a country half-destroyed by the excesses of Socialist policies — weighed down by taxation and inflation, deeply in debt, torn by strikes, starved for capital, half its industry already nationalized and having to be supported by still more taxation and inflation.

Yet there are some moderate voices in the Labor government; the chancellor of the exchequer, whatever his other sins, has cried out against continued economic profligacy. These are voices Wilson would support.

Not so the Foots and the Benns. Indeed, Foot, the white-haired and silver-tongued orator, has proclaimed: "I want to move toward a Socialist government as fast as I can." You are left to wonder how much faster the country could go, or how much further, short of complete government control of everything.

This is the true quarrel joined between the house of Eilon and, let us call it, the house of Benn. At stake, first of all, is the control of the Labor Party itself. That wrested from Wilson, the rebels would hope to have a fulcrum of national power for re-making Britain to their own image.

Their reasoning runs like this: Wilson has now staked his political future on Britain's remaining in the Common Market. He has irrevocably led his cabinet and followers within the parliamentary party to make this the central issue.

Therefore if the voters in the June referendum can be persuaded to vote "No," that is to vote for withdrawal from the Common Market, they will have at one stroke repudiated not only the Conservative Party, which took Britain into the market, but the Labor prime minister, Wilson, who urged remaining in it.

Such an outcome might also, not too incidentally, precipitate a constitutional crisis. Would Parliament ignore the voters and keep Britain in? Or would the members reverse themselves, vote now against their convictions and judgment, and declare Britain out, thus abdicating their constitutional responsibility?

Either way, a "No," vote would discredit Wilson and his parliamentary supporters, leaving him hardly any honorable course but resignation. And that would leave those who led the fight against the Common Market as the true spokesmen of both the Labor Party and the people.

Conversely, of course, a "Yes" vote would vindicate both the Conservative decision to take Britain into the market and Wilson's decision to remain. Then the power of the house of Benn would wane, if indeed he wasn't sent to the Tower.

209 danger our problem

We're getting pretty tired of those bureaucrats and politicians in Harrisburg and Washington passing Rte. 209 back and forth between them.

It's pretty clear by now that no one intends to do anything about the highway. The state Department of Transportation claims it hasn't the money to rebuild the highway, says the traffic problem is all the fault of the federal government anyway, and we should harangue those administrators until they agree to rebuild 209.

The federal government, for its part, modestly declines any responsibility for the traffic problem, notes that 209 is a Pennsylvania-built highway, and says it's the state's problem to solve.

Well, we don't think it's the state's problem; it's our problem. It's the problem of Monroe County and Pike County, of all the residents there, of all those travelers and tourists and truck drivers who have to use the highway; of all the schoolchildren who have to take the school buses on that highway and risk their necks in so doing.

But those who suffer most from the problem are those least able to do anything about it. That's why we have governments, state and federal: to help out small groups by the application of sums of money collected from large groups. In a word, to give us service.

Rep. Joseph McDade has been doing a whale of a job in trying everything he knows to get something done about 209. He is taking political risks to force the issue. But he is getting nowhere.

Perhaps it's just that this is an economically inpropitious time to go begging for large sums of highway money. But the problem of Rte 209 is one of long standing and high danger; it isn't going to get better with the passage of time, and the longer we wait for improvement, the more lives will be lost.

Let's probe Vietnam

President Ford opposes a congressional investigation into the causes of our involvement in Vietnam because it would be divisive. The President also opposed Senate hearings on Watergate for the same reason, but we have not seen much divisiveness because the hearings were held.

The expressed fear of dividing the nation has forestalled many a hard look at our government's policies in the past and we probably have been the worse off for it. Had Congress gone along with a minority of its members in the late '60s and investigated what we were doing in Vietnam and why, we might not be in the uncomfortable position we now occupy.

By all means, let's take a close, hard look at what happened in the Vietnam era. Contrary to Ford's contention, we have not learned all the lessons Vietnam can teach us, because we have not done our homework yet.

Recycling in recession

Research report

The great recycling boom of the early 1970s has fizzled. Around the nation, volunteer recycling centers which once resounded with the smashing of glass bottles and the clattering of tin cans sit idle. Waste paper warehouses are overflowing with bundles of old, yellowing newspapers which no one will buy. And the million or so U.S. citizens who devoutly saved their used cans, bottles, jars, newspapers and magazines for recycling are reluctantly throwing them out with the trash again, adding to America's growing solid waste burden.

What happened to recycling? Mainly, the recession. Nationwide economic decline inevitably led to a recycling slump because the price and the need for raw materials fell so far that manufacturers stopped buying any scrap. "The recycling market is an up and down kind of thing," said Stephen Brooks, manager of Recory Recycling, Berkeley, Calif. "Right now, there's no demand."

The waste paper market was hardest hit. Early last year old newspapers commanded up to $60 a ton, but today the price has plummeted to as low as $5 a ton — if a buyer can be found. Most recycled paper goes into building materials such as insulation, wallboard and roofing — all in low demand with the decline in construction. Other waste paper ends up as corrugated packing boxes, but sales of furniture and appliances have been slow. The crippled automobile industry also uses recycled waste paper for seat, trunk and glove compartment interiors.

Last summer, more than 120 cities were separating newspapers from other trash for recycling, according to the Environmental Protection Agency. Today municipal participation is on the wane. Cities lost so much money that they had to discontinue their programs. Other cities still collect newspapers, hoping the market will pick up, but many have had to haul these papers to the dump.

Volunteer recycling centers were also struck by disillusion with their lofty goals. "We found that recycling was just not the answer," said John Breier, head of Sensible Citizens Against Throwaways in Washington, D.C. "We were giving the citizens a sop . . . But it is just not right to be recycling when 50 per cent of the stuff shouldn't be in the trash barrels." Breier and many other environmentalists believe that "source reduction" — cutting down on what is thrown away — is a solution preferable to recycling.

Even so, the National Association of Recycling Industries (NARI) is lobbying Congress for legislation to change what it calls "discriminatory federal policies" against recycled materials. The association charges that depletion allowance and other tax laws provide incentives for virgin materials; that transportation policies permit raw materials to be moved at half the cost of scrap; and that procurement policies favor products made from virgin materials.

Perhaps the only bright spot on the recycling scene is that the price paid for steel and aluminum cans climbed from 10 to 15 cents a pound, and the price for used glass has held steady at $20 per ton. But this, too, may be affected by the recession — when people are unemployed, they tend to drink more.

Stories Behind Words

By William Penfield

Caviar to the general

"General" in the phrase "caviar to the general" does not refer to a military officer. In this sense it denotes the masses or multitude, the general public.

The phrase comes from Shakespeare's "Hamlet." Hamlet says of a play "twas caviar to the general." Caviar is the pressed and salted roe, or eggs, of the sturgeon and is eaten as a relish.

One generally has to acquire a taste for caviar. Since it is expensive, the common man doesn't have the opportunity to acquire the taste. Something that is "caviar to the general," therefore, is above the comprehension or taste of the ordinary person.

Congress must regain control over monetary policy

Nicholas Von Hoffman

Zeus in the witness chair is intimidating. The white hair, the old-fashioned suit with the pants held up by suspenders, the smoke, the waving of the extinguished matches around. Dr. Burns has presence. Unlike most officials of high rank who testify with their general counsel on one side of them, their first deputy on the other and three flunkies immediately to the rear to hand up documents and whisper, Dr. Burns takes on the Congress by himself with nothing more than the contents of a scuffed leather portfolio.

As befits a Zeus figure, his attitude toward the senators is that of a father who sees his children asking complicated questions on a subject before they've learned the fundamentals. "Do you have any assumption at all as to the inflation rate?" Senator Proxmire of the famously perfect hairline inquires. "Well, I remain optimistic," Dr. Burns replies with masterful imprecision and then meanders off into Olympian discourse which the gods themselves would be pressed to follow.

The money god will not be pinned down. "Oh, I'm not going to fight the numbers game with you today, senator, or any other day," he says, and Proxmire, who has a first-rate mind under that second-rate hair transplant, backs off. Another witness might be thrown in jail for saying things like, "I see no point in throwing numbers at you . . . senator, you could not have chosen a poorer example. You won't take my advice, but I'll tell you the best I can." The advice Zeus then proffered was that the Congress would do the country and itself a favor if it took an extended sabbatical to go back to Ashtabula and "look at the damage you've done."

This behavior fits in with the Washington idea that Congress is too stupid, too lazy, too cowardly and too irresponsible to exercise control over monetary policy, although the Constitution specifically sticks it with the job. Hence, it has become the custom to talk about the "independent" Federal Reserve Board, which, it is asserted, has the wisdom and expertise to do what the elected dolts can't do.

If the last few years haven't won Congress greater public confidence, they have weakened discerning people's faith in the Federales. Except for one period in the 1950s, economic historians have come to the conclusion that the Federales' record has been a sequence of boners, miscues and blunders. Dr. Zeus himself is suffering from withdrawal of professional esteem. Not only is he accused of playing a major part in bringing on first the inflation and then the recession, but his own staff back at the Fed is pot-shooting him. At the last party of the Fed's data production section, they say there was a big, snide sign up on the wall, reading: "GO ARTHUR! BEAT TREASURY!"

The upshot is that some people are beginning to say that, if the economy is going to be messed up anyway, it ought to be messed up by the elected representatives of the people who have direct, constitutional instructions to do so. Beyond that, there is a growing appreciation that fiscal policy — that is, taxes, expenditures, surpluses and deficits — can be canceled out, distorted or dispensed with by monetary policy, now under the Fed's control.

Men like Proxmire are realizing that monetary policy, the power to print money, can possibly be used more effectively to achieve full employment without inflation than big deficits. They're beginning to see why Alexander Hamilton, who didn't have a Ph.D. in econ., and his pals, placed monetary and fiscal policy together in the exclusive power of Congress. The two are natural complements like the clutch and the accelerator in a stick-shift automobile.

The history of the gods tells us that Zeus was able to squash many a rebellion on Mount Olympus, and politicians often give away their power in hopes the voters will then not blame them for the ensuing foulups.

How Jacqueline is different from other great ladies

Jack Anderson

with Les Whitten

For still other reasons she is a particular lightning rod for public attention. Her choice of lifestyle, which by ordinary standards is exotic, attracts the spotlight.

The Jacqueline Kennedy who in the years of Camelot and the days of Dallas won a place in the nation's heart and imagination left the White House with a prestige that could have been a tremendous force for good.

When fate bestows a staggering opportunity to serve mankind, it also inflicts a responsibility that supersedes private inclinations. Eleanor Roosevelt took up that burden; Coretta King has taken it up. Jacqueline Kennedy has shirked it, pursuing instead luxury, languor, gowns, jewels and the wheedling of unearned wealth.

Her reign as queen of the jet set has been chronicled largely by the gossip writers who report the bon mots, the pouts and the whims of the social butterflies. Our columns, on the contrary, were not based at all upon gossip dropped at posh parties.

The late Aristotle Onassis himself piqued our interest by inviting us to his favorite Manhattan restaurant last December for a private talk. It turned out to be his last conversation with a newsmen.

He had little to say about his famous wife except for a mild complaint about her extravagance and her horsy friends. But we learned afterwards that he had indicated to his closest associates that we could be trusted. This led some of them to confide in us after his death.

Private papers

We were also shown private papers, letters and other documents. We spent three weeks pursuing every lead and checking out every detail. For Jackie's side of the story, we spoke to several of her friends, and we offered to go over every allegation with her personally.

We reported thereafter that the huge Onassis estate will be controlled by daughter Christina, not wife Jacqueline, and that the marriage had been preceded by a written contract providing a cash settlement on Jacqueline of at least $3 million in tax-free bonds.

She also received a spending allowance, which began at $30,000 a month but was cut to $20,000 by Onassis in protest over her spending habits. She had other prerequisites such as charge privileges in the famous shopping emporiums of the world.

We reported further that Jacqueline systematically converted gowns, gifts and other indulgences of Onassis into cash by selling them off at fashionable New York City resale houses.

As signs accumulated that the largesse was ending, Jackie reacted by intensifying her efforts. During her husband's final illness, she went on a shopping spree at Bloomingdale's.

A close friend of the Onassis told us: "She thought it might be her last fling. She is so avaricious, so greedy." But her secretary, Nancy Tuckerman, claimed Jackie had to buy many items for her new home in New Jersey. "Life must go on," said Ms. Tuckerman.

Not long after the Onassis funeral, the indispensable Ms. Tuckerman was dispatched to the New York headquarters to inquire about the continuation of the allowance. Christina apparently is letting it continue.

Thus has Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, who had so much potential for good, chosen instead a life of uselessness. Each year she consumes enough of the world's luxuries to provide necessities for hundreds of families.

No indications when court will rule

Mazzei files extortion appeal

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals took under advisement Thursday the appeal of state Sen. Frank Mazzei of Pittsburgh, convicted last fall of extortion charges in connection with a state leasing contract.

There was no indication when the court would rule.

Mazzei's attorney, John Rogers Carroll, called on the full panel of nine judges to reverse his client's conviction on grounds the government failed to prove the elements of coercion and interstate commerce required by the federal Hobbs Act.

Carroll's argument was countered by Richard L. Thornburgh, U.S. attorney for the western district of Pennsylvania, who contended that Mazzei, 62, D-Allegheny, was properly found guilty of an "abuse of official power which was sufficient to meet the requirements of Hobbs."

Mazzei was convicted last Nov. 26 of accepting $20,000 in kickbacks from BMI, Inc., in the rental of space for two state agencies in a building in his district on Pittsburgh's south side.

The lawmaker was ordered removed from office as part of his five-year prison sentence and $20,000 fine, but the ouster edict was blocked by the circuit court here, pending disposition of his appeal. The senator recently took an unpaid leave of absence after Democrats cut off Republican efforts to expel him from office and voted to recess until June 1.

Carroll claimed that in prosecuting Mazzei under Hobbs, the government was obligated to prove there was duress and the leasing transaction in the form of "force, violence or fear."

The attorney contended that Leo Kelly, BMI's secretary-treasurer had described the payments as the equivalent of real estate commission which would steer business to the firm.

"The mere voluntary payment of money, unaccompanied by any fear of economic loss would not constitute extortion," Carroll said.

Thornburgh told the judges that recent circuit court rulings have decided that obtaining money under "color of official right" was sufficient for an extortion conviction. He defined the term as the "wrongful taking by a public official of money not due to the official or due to his office."

This element, Thornburgh claimed, sufficed to replace the coercion aspects cited by Carroll. "Mazzei was guilty of an abuse of official power," he said.

Thornburgh claimed that there was no need for a "precise effect" on interstate commerce to comply with Hobbs.

"Yet, there was a national depletion of assets" of BMI's subsidiaries as a result of its transaction, he said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James West told the court U.S. District Judge Rabe Marsh of Pittsburgh acted correctly when he ordered Mazzei removed from office.

"Mazzei was automatically removed when he was convicted," he said.

Judge Arlin Adams questioned whether Marsh had the power to remove the senator from office and Judge Francis Van Dusen suggested to West that Marsh could have eliminated any condition of sentence involving removal.

Constitutionality argued

Court studies Pa. abortion funding

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals Thursday sifted through pro and con arguments on the constitutionality of state regulations which fund abortions for the poor only if they are "medically necessary."

The case came here as a result of rulings in the federal court at Pittsburgh.

"The condition of pregnancy requires medical attention," attorney R. Stanton Wettick told the full panel of nine judges. "The state has aligned its resources in favor of childbirth and against abortion."

Wettick claimed that the regulations violated the equal protection rights of pregnant women seeking abortions under the Medicaid program.

"It makes no sense to put a label of non-necessity on abortions," he said. "The Commonwealth has done so to save funds."

Deputy Pennsylvania Attorney General Norman J. Watkins maintained that the Medicaid regulations were valid and were not affected—except in Philadelphia—by a three-judge federal court ruling here which has temporarily enjoined sections of the Pennsylvania Abortion Control Act.

"This is purely a public funding case," Watkins said. "We are trying to decide the best way to allocate public funds for medical services."

The court took the pleas under advisement.

The case came before the circuit court on cross-appeals which stemmed from rulings by the federal court in Pittsburgh.

Geese won't go home

EASTON, Md. (UPI) — Maryland's geese won't leave. Two winters ago, millions of blackbirds, grackles and starlings invaded a pine grove in the western Maryland hamlet of Graceham and made life miserable for humans for several months.

In the meantime, with the hunting season long over, the geese are free to do as they please. Several country clubs learned that lesson to their dismay when geese chewed up golf course greens and left the place a mess with their droppings.

Some of the old Graceham scare tactics, such as whistling rockets and firecrackers, have been resurrected.

Suspect held in cop killing

BRISTOL, Pa. (UPI) — Accused cop killer Joseph Hennessey was held without bail Thursday pending a hearing next Tuesday in Bucks County Court.

Hennessey, 29, of Philadelphia, was apprehended Wednesday night in Philadelphia on a tip by a 17-year-old girl friend. He later was turned over to Bensalem Twp. authorities.

Hennessey had eluded police for nearly a month following the shooting death of Patrolman James Armstrong, 28, of Cornwells Heights, after a gasoline station holdup.

This spring, a gaggle of 20,000 Canadian geese are causing similar headaches, on a smaller scale, on the Eastern Shore and other parts of the Delmarva Peninsula. The geese have cut short their traditional northward migration to linger on the peninsula and live off the fat of the land.

"They're off the small grain now," lamented one farmer, "and they've just about eaten up the pasture."

Government wildlife experts say some geese always have lived year-round on the peninsula and that this year's problems are due to an increase in the Canadian goose population. They also predict that most of the lingering flocks will leave for the north before long.

Some of the old Graceham scare tactics, such as whistling rockets and firecrackers, have been resurrected.

The case came before the circuit court on cross-appeals which stemmed from rulings by the federal court in Pittsburgh.

Jewelry is found at waist this fall

NEW YORK (UPI) — You'll jingle-jangle this fall and winter, if you go for the newest trend — gobs of jewelry dangling from the waist.

The metal everything — some looking big as dishes in a kid's play tea set — dangle from chains and make a racket when one walks.

Pauline Trigere, the award-winning and pace-setting American designer, showed such ornamentation in New York when she unboxed her new collection for buyers.

Miss Trigere's departs from recent past silhouettes — which were c l o a k e d, thick and wrapped to the ears.

Her new coats are skinny for the most part. Her capes are not so flowing. And her jumpsuits skim the body the anatomy-defining way.

The Trigere pants outfits in wool jersey included slacks with legs that seemed a foot wide from thigh to ankle.

These were shown with either a pea coat or a regular length one in straight lines.

She showed a flock of tweed coats, many collarless and most with buttons hidden — to emphasize the plain lines.

Dresses underneath were wool jersey as a rule and had long sleeves and jewelry necklines. Many were cut to be worn with or without a wide waist-cinching belt. When unbelted these wool dresses and some for evening, made of chiffon, billowed like tents.

Her evening things took a lot of rhinestone trim, including rhinestone necklaces so large that they looked like Peter Pan collars.

One particularly outstanding outfit: a white wool cape over a long black dress with shoe string straps and studded with rhinestone designs.

The cape was shorter in front — a design Miss Trigere said is best for getting in and out of a car.

Army's women don't do battle

NEW YORK (UPI) — This is the Army. Miss and Mrs. Jones. And if you're in it, there's no coddling, except for the fact you're not allowed in combat if there is another skirmish, another war.

Otherwise, in almost all respects, the U.S. Army today treats women as equal with men. But as for combat, Secretary of Army Howard H. Callaway has this to say:

"You know the attitude toward women today compared to five years ago is changing, so I can only speak of the present. The army leadership today would take the position that we are not going to put women in combat until required by the law or the courts.

"We don't think the country is ready for it."

"We don't think when Israel tried it, it worked as well as they thought it was going to and backed off."

"We don't think it's a more effective army by doing that (putting women in the front lines). But of course, if required to by presidential order, by the courts, by ERA (Equal Rights Amendment), of course we're going to do it. But we don't intend to get ahead of it and do it...

"If ERA passes, I will be in favor of whatever the courts say because I'm in favor of the law of the land."

Secretary Callaway's views on women's role in the army were expressed in an interview with the UPI Editorial Board. He went into the equal rights matter in answer to a question concerning those critics of the amendment who say that its passage would mean women subject to the draft, subject to combat duty.

Minerals
WASHINGTON, D.C. — Now that you've gotten it straight on just what proteins, fats, carbohydrates and vitamins are, someone mentions minerals. Yes, minerals, too, are essential for good health and growth.

The Food and Drug Administration has a reprint that talks about 19 mineral elements — what they do for the body and foods to get them from. A free copy of A Primer on Dietary Minerals may be had by writing Consumer Information, Dept. 19, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Among the minerals that are considered extremely important are:

— Calcium is largely responsible for the hardness of bones and teeth, small amounts aid in the proper functioning of muscles and nerves, and help the blood to clot. Although growing children and pregnant and lactating women have the highest calcium needs, all people need it in their diets throughout life. Milk and milk products are good sources — as well as green leafy vegetables (except spinach and chard).

— Phosphorus is an important part of every tissue of the body and is present in bones and teeth — good sources are meat, poultry, fish, eggs, and whole-grain foods.

— One of the more important "trace elements" is iron. It's an important part of compounds necessary for transporting oxygen to the cells and making use of oxygen when it arrives. You have to work at getting enough iron because only a few foods contain it in useful amounts. These include liver, meat products, egg yolk, fish, green leafy vegetables, dried peas and beans, dried fruits, whole grain cereals and foods prepared from iron-enriched cereal products.

Also included in the booklet is a chart of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances for minerals.

Pots and pans
The General Services Administration also has a booklet containing information to help you find cookware and ovenware that is safe, long lasting, easy to use and a good value for your money. For a copy of Pots and Pans send 35 cents to Consumer Information, Dept.

20, Pueblo, Colorado 81009. Included in the booklet is the advice to be sure:

— The pot or pan is easy and safe to carry and pour from, and balanced so it will sit on a level surface without tipping whether full or empty; made of material that spreads heat evenly and quickly to food; easy to clean inside and out; and not likely to chip, crack, or warp in everyday use or to bend, dent, or break if dropped.

— Handles are easy to grip, sturdy but not heavy, and about parallel to the top of the pot or pan for efficient control, and fastened so that they can't rotate or wobble up and down.

Old-fashioned thrift

Baking soda . . . again?

Yes.

You'll find that in addition to a multitude of other uses, baking soda (bicarbonate of soda) is also a money saver on your automobile (not on the paint, on the battery).

A car battery which is washed with baking soda and water at regular intervals to remove corrosion can easily last twice as long as one which does not have this treatment. Careful though! Baking soda inside a battery will ruin it for good. — Katie Hess

Keeping score

Dieter needs calorie guides

By BARBARA GIBBONS
You can't play the diet game if you don't know the score and scorekeeping means calorie-counting. Some widely published guides . . . inaccurate and out of date . . . are worse than useless.

In answer to many requests from readers, here are three reference books that provide calorie data in depth:

"DICTIONARY OF PROTEIN" by Barbara Kraus (Harper & Row, $8.95). Since the word "calories" doesn't appear in the title, a dieter might easily overlook this volume but the calorie information is there, right alongside the number of grams of protein. Organized alphabetically, from abalone to Nabisco's Zwei-back, counts are given in common household portions: cups, slices, tablespoons, etc. Helpful? It'll tell you that both a "McDonald's Quarter Pounder" and a "Big Mac" offer 26 grams of protein; but Big Mac has 561 calories; the "Quarter Pounder" 145 calories less.

"DICTIONARY OF PROTEIN" was just published this month but I predict it will become a dieter's staple . . . a retread of "Calories and Carbohydrate" by Miss Kraus. It's more up-to-date and indicates best economy buys for lowest-calorie, highest-protein meat choices.

"CONSUMER'S GUIDE TO FOOD: THE BRAND NAME GAME" (Consumer Magazine, $1.95). Calories, the protein, carbohydrates, fat, sodium, iron and vitamin makeup of common and brand-name foods are given in this 386-page paperback; particularly useful to those on special diets. Entries are organized into food groups — including special foods; diet and health foods usually overlooked by calorie guides. The Breakfast Food section reveals Kellogg's Special K cereal is highest in protein, lowest in calories.

"COMPOSITION OF FOODS, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE HANDBOOK NO. 8" (Government Printing Office, $20). This is the granddaddy of calorie guides, the source from which other guides generally get their information. It lists calories, carbohydrates, fat, protein, minerals and vitamins of nearly all common foods — no brand names — and it can be a bit puzzling, at first, since it doesn't list food in common household serving portions. Food information is given for foods cooked (if usually eaten that way) and raw. A meat shopper would conclude from a reading that chicken breasts are the best over other chicken parts for protein and lowest in fat, calories and waste, and that prime ribs are one of the poorer beef buys.

Just Between Us — —

By Bobby Westbrook

The merry month of May in the Poconos is when all the club women go off their diets in a veritable orgy of closing luncheons, brunches and dinners, fashion shows, card parties and special programs — sometimes simultaneously.

It's also the month when their families go on comparatively spartan fare. Either they have to watch steaming casseroles or high-rise cakes being borne out of the house to a covered dish dinner or put up with what a still-stuffed-from-luncheon cook feels up to fixing for dinner.

However, the day of delivery is at hand, particularly for the families of club presidents who have concluded their two years of servitude to the demands, complaints, sensibilities and surprises of their members.

Although I've noted that serving as president of one organization leaves a woman wide open to pressure from other groups to come and do likewise.

The AAUW is going to miss Ev Lewis presiding, since she could always be counted on for the unexpected — unexpected to herself, too, very often.

Betty Hartman celebrated her retirement as president of the Monroe County Garden Club in a sort of busman's holiday, a garden and bonsai tour of the Orient with her sister's Florida Garden Club — and they had some unexpected happenings, too.

Betty, recently recovered from a broken ankle, took particular care to take her sister's arm going downstairs to avoid any similar mishap. She took an especially firm grip one night leaving a dance program in Hong Kong and crossing a dark and cobble courtyard.

After picking their way with care and in silence to the gate, Betty turned to say something to her sister only to find that she was clutching a surprised, but pleased, Iranian gentleman.

And speaking of long-range family connections, Rosemary McMahon is rejoicing in the fact that the wedding of No. 2 daughter last weekend brought No. 1 daughter from her home in France for a month's visit.

A weekend visit was all I had with the grandchildren and the dog while their parents were attending a college reunion — but a weekend was long enough for the dog — a 90-pound German shepherd who tried to adjust his tail-wagging to apartment-sized living and his suburban ways to the wilds of the river.

Jealously he watched the stick-retrieving triumphs of a born-to-swim golden retriever, while all he could manage was a sort of walking-on-the-water splashing. However, when he saw his beloved children taking off in a tippy boat which he would get into on a bet, he couldn't bear it.

After pacing the shore frantically moaning and whining and howling for them to come back, he decided bravely to come to their rescue — only to get caught in the current and find himself literally swimming for his life.

Then it was the children who were crying and moaning and who had to be restrained from jumping in to his rescue. Everybody made it safely to shore and achieved the quickest river exodus I've ever been able to manage — with a careful of wet dog and tear-stained children. They didn't even begrudge a rainy Sunday, safe if crowded at home.

Ann Landers

Reception problem

Dear Ann Landers: Our problem is one that has been causing a lot of anxiety in our family. We need an outside opinion from someone who is not a Baptist. You have been selected.

Our son is planning to be married on August 9. The trouble is over the reception. His fiancée's parents are very strict Baptists. They do not drink any kind of liquor. Even spiked punch is out. The wedding will be held in the church and the reception which follows will take place in the church parlor.

Since my husband and I wish to respect their wishes we went ahead and made reservations at our country club for a second reception — following theirs. A bar will be set up and liquor will be served. We have engaged an orchestra for dancing.

When we told our son of our plans he was furious. He informed us that he and his bride would not attend the reception, that it would be considered a slap in the face to his future in-laws and their relatives.

How can we make him see how selfish his attitude is? Our friends and family will have a very dull evening unless my husband and I entertain them in the manner to which they are accustomed.

Will you please come to the rescue, Ann?

Want To Do It Right

Dear Want To: Sorry, you rattled the wrong cage. You are dead wrong.

The parents of the bride are putting on the wedding and reception. You and your relatives and friends should go along with whatever they have planned. If you can't get through the night without booze, then get plastered by yourself, after you get home.

Should you care to have a reception when the couple returns from their honeymoon, it would be perfectly proper to do so. You could then serve kerosene and battery acid if you wanted to since it would be your party. But you would, I hope, have non-alcoholic beverages on hand for the bride's side — if they wish to attend.

Dear Ann Landers: We moved into a new apartment a few weeks ago. Last night the select THAT chair to sit on?

Someone made a feeble joke about suing us, but not one word was mentioned about replacing the chair. Do you feel the woman who broke it is responsible? Your opinion is needed.

Goodbye George III

Dear George: Forget it. You're lucky the woman didn't break her back. People assume that chairs are to sit on. Anything as fragile as your "lovely antique" should be put in a bedroom or a closet when you entertain.

Dear Ann Landers: For the past seven months I have been dating an unwed father. Perry is 21 years old. (I am 20.) His baby is six months old and he is crazy about her. He was engaged to marry the mother but they couldn't get along and the engagement was broken twice. He still sees her because he is so wild about the child.

Perry's parents have been on his back a lot since the baby was born. They want him to marry the girl and work out their differences later. This is their only grandchild and they are crazy about the little girl, too.

Everything was fine until two months ago when I had to leave town to take care of my sister's children. She needed surgery and I offered to help out. When I returned to town, Perry said his feelings toward me had changed and we could never go back to where we were. I love the guy and want things back to normal. I'm sure when I was away the baby's mother got to him and this is where the trouble started.

Will you please tell me how to get Perry to marry me? I know he loves me and not the mother of his child. He has told me so a dozen times.

Perry's Girl

Dear Girl: Sorry, but you're fighting a losing battle — actually if you lose this one you win.

An unwilling groom makes a very poor husband. Perry would be forever going back to the other woman in order to see his child. This would be a source of never-ending arguments between you two. My advice is to write off Perry NOW and save yourself a lot of heartache.

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

NEW YORK — Jane Russell sans fanfare has been one of the major locomotives and fund raisers helping fly Vietnam orphans to the U.S. via her WAIF (children's division of Traveler's, Aid-Int'l Social Service of America, which she founded) . . . WAIF benefited from all receipts last weekend's "Only on Sunday — an Evening for the Gods" at the delightful Manhattan uproar house, Dionysos; Helen Hayes is honorary WAIF chairman . . . Sly (of the Family Stone) hired as bodyguard a karate champ, Owen Watson . . . World's heavyweight karate champ is Joe Lewis; neat 40-year-separated phonetic coincidence, wot? . . . Someone asked us what we thought of the "serious" articles among the sex-nudity in Playboy, Playgirl, Playmag, Viva, Schmeeva, Oui, Weewee and other transparently socially significant camouflaged rags of the Fifth Estate. Answer: the so-called serious articles are their "fig leaves."

Marcello Mastroianni's split with Catherine Deneuve all but crushed his gallic ego but it's surfacing again with another French amour, "And Now My Love" star Marthe Keller . . . Hobnobility at Sardi's: "Candide" director-producer Hal Prince, tennis-maven Alan King, glorious music-thunderer Count Basie . . . Flation: The Stage Deli expansion adds 40 seats (to 125) plus a sidewalk deliteria . . . "A Little Night Music" won London raves, a rarity for Bdwy. musicals crossing the pond; the London Mail Valentined it with "One of the miracles of the modern theatre" . . . Big recording mogul won $200,000 blackjack at Las Vegas; Burt Reynolds' similar card trick won a tinier fortune.

Sockard Channing is a girrull and her role in the imminent "The Fortune" won't earn her a fortune — she's already inherited that: Stockard's a shipping heiress; in the movie she plays a cosmetics heiress pursued by Warren Beatty and Jack Nicholson (she played the ugly college cygnet in Joan Rivers' black TV comedy "The Girl Most Likely To") . . . Dina Merrill, another real multi-heiress, actress and for a few years spokesbeauty for a cosmetics line bearing her name (for Coty) quietly dropped that extramural bonanza.

H.L. Mencken's "No one ever went broke underestimating the taste of the American public" seemed suitable topical again as Bette Midler's revue proved she's not just a campy comic but a vulgar practitioner of the dregs of showbiz; detailing all her witless filth would be futile. And why do homosexual audiences howl delighted raunchy chorles at La Midler, eclectic La Bottomler . . . Certainly such hysterically humorless reaction does little for seriously image-worried Gays.

Tina Sinatra's back pains were helped by acupuncture . . . N.Y. Police Capt. Artie Deutsch quietly added an artistic vocation to his myriad police interests: he's already sold two TV scripts to the "McCloud" series, has two movies fresh off his typewriter — and the skeletons of two TV series; Artie is a former boss of the N.Y. mounted police . . . The best inside-political hint we get is that Jerry Ford won't run for re-election and Teddy Kennedy is running like craze; if Pres. Ford won't, it may be Teddy vs. Rocky . . . Newsweek backs up our non-Ford in the White House future.

The late great film tycoon Barney Balaban's offsprings are up to their inheritances in showbiz: son Red has his own jazz group in his own W. 54th St. cafe he's named "Eddie Condon's" in honor of the late jazz hipster; now Barney's flame-tressed daughter, Judith Balaban (Mrs. Don) Quine, is actively into karate as a new professional sport, Don as president of the "Professional Karate Ass'n." Judy as secretary-treasurer; no unfriendly ex-wife is Judy, wed to Don these eight years; among their PKA board of advisors are listed her ex-spouses (ex-spice?) Jay Kanter and Anthony Franciosa . . . The somewhat hokey advisory board also includes such unprofessional non-karate non-champs as Milton Berle, George Peppard, Jack Nicholson, John Barry Ryan III, and a non-golfing banker named Arnold Palmer; they all think they have a good financial thing going.

Exchanging gifts

Our son, Bruce, has a friend who shares his birth date.

"For the last two years his friend has appeared at the door with a birthday present and Bruce has stood there like a kid with twelve fingers and no pockets."

Yesterday he said, "Lenny is on his way over. Do you think he's got a present again?"

"You mean you don't have one for him?"

"No. I keep thinking he'll give up on me."

"Then we've got to find something around the house. Think!" I yelled at the family.

"No," protested Bruce, "not the garage rejects again. I remember the birthday party I went to last year where I took a package of Ping-Pong balls."

"What's wrong with that? They had never been opened."

"He didn't have a Ping-Pong table. That's what was wrong with it."

"How would Lenny like a hummingbird feeder?" asked his father. "I have one in the garage in the original box."

"I have a record," I said, "with the celophane still intact."

"Is that the one with Debbie Drake exercising?" he asked.

"Look, you're in no position to be picky . . ."

"Why don't you give Lenny that appointment book that no one uses."

"Or what about that little whale with the bubble bath in it."

"Mom!" said Bruce miserably.

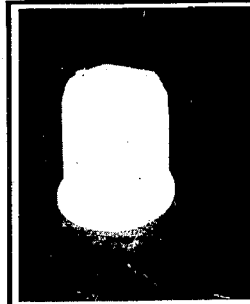

"There's a key ring in my bureau drawer that hasn't been out of the package with a Pisces horoscope sign."

"Except Lenny isn't a Pisces."

"Why don't we give him that little kit in my sewing basket where you decorate your jeans with silver studs?"

"He gave me that last year," said Bruce.

"I could fill him a little bag of cookies and candy."

"Do we own any books that someone hasn't used a piece of salami for a bookmark? How about a ball-point pen?"

"With 'BEN'S SHOCK ABSORBERS; 24-HOUR SERVICE' printed on it?" he winced.

I had just finished twisting the ends of the tissue around the pen when Lenny knocked on the door.

"Happy birthday, Bruce. I didn't get you a present."

Bruce heaved a sigh. "Boy, are you lucky."

4-Hers to train sight dogs

TANNERSVILLE — Four families each received a champagne-colored ball of fluff with brown eyes Thursday night at the Tannersville School.

The four six-week-old Labrador retrievers were given to members of the 4-H Guide Dog Puppy Club who will raise the dogs until they are a year old.

After a year the dogs will be returned to the Guide Dog Foundation at Smithtown, N.Y., where they will undergo about six months training and an additional month with their new master.

"They must be raised in a home condition because they must live in a home. They must be exposed to everything in a home," explained John Biegel of the foundation.

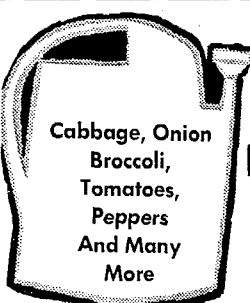

The 4-H members are expected to train the dogs to walk and sit at their left and to obey voice commands. They must also housebreak the puppies.

"Once in a while there are some problems raising them. The roughest part is giving back the puppies. Even the puppies get depressed about it," Biegel said.

"It's like giving up one of the children. That's why we take another," said Mrs. Dorothy DeStefano, who came to return a dog and get one of the puppies.

"They're very friendly and gentle. They send a picture of them with their new owner," commented Mrs. Thomas Neyhart who brought her five-month-old puppy to the school for a shot.

Volunteers adopt United Way tag

STROUDSBURG — The Community Chest was officially christened the "United Way of Monroe County" Thursday at the annual executive meeting.

Walter Wyckoff, president of the executive board of the United Way, said that based on a call for a common name and identity for all local community organizations, the Community Chest has changed its name to the United Way and has adopted the helping hand logo as its permanent symbol.

While responding to the call for uniformity, the United Way of Monroe County will retain its wholly local character applying the talents of community volunteers to the problems and needs of the Monroe County area.

The term United Way is not specifically identified with fund raising, an organization release explains. Rather, it is an all-encompassing term which is identified with the combined community efforts of voluntary planning, budgeting, allocating funds and fund-raising.

The symbol represents man at the center of a helping hand and a rainbow. The helping hand can be said to stand for the United Way and its member agencies, or it can stand for the help of volunteers.

The rainbow stands for the hope and potential for a better quality of life provided through the United Way.

The United Way of Monroe County operates through a volunteer 25-member Board of Directors, a nine-member executive committee which acts for the board in establishing policy, setting objectives and making administrative decisions, operating divisions and committee volunteers and acting on specific concerns.

One in three support dam

Tocks study tests public opinion

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter

TRENTON, N.J. — One of three Monroe and Pike County residents favor constructing the Tocks Island Dam, according to a survey released by the Delaware River Basin Commission.

The questioning of 100 Monroe and 50 Pike County residents was done as part of the Tocks restudy ordered last August by Congress.

Only one of 10 persons in the two counties did not take a stand on the controversial proposed dam across the Delaware River north of Shawnee-on-Delaware.

While the majority of Monroe and Pike County residents polled opposed the dam, nearly half of the people polled from Orange and Sullivan Counties, N.Y., favored building a dam and over half in Northampton County want the dam built. A total of 500 people were interviewed.

In Warren and Sussex Counties, N.J., which along with Monroe and Pike Counties, will be directly affected by Tocks Lake, about four of 10 persons favor construction of the dam.

The survey, conducted by a Baltimore, Md., research company, was a detailed breakdown of residents' outlook on life in the impact area, economic concerns, and a collection of opinions on Tocks Island, the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

It also pinpointed areas of highest opposition to the project — namely Monroe and Pike Counties — and analyzed the survey's findings.

For instance, people who are aware of the project (91 per cent in Monroe and Pike Counties, 56 per cent overall in all seven counties) more will oppose than favor, the study said.

The study also found a large number of Monroe and Pike residents who do not want either the Tocks Island Dam or the national recreation area in the two counties.

Their major objection was the projects will harm the environment and lead to a change of lifestyles for area residents due to an influx of people visiting the recreation area.

However, of those who prefer the recreation area without a dam (20 per cent in Monroe, eight per cent in Pike and 13 per cent in all seven counties combined), they said the dam would destroy the area's appearance and flood the land.

Those who prefer just the dam feel its benefits — flood control, electricity and water supply are necessary, but recreation is not.

Of the problems mentioned, many Monroe and Pike residents fear overcrowding, increased traffic and an increase in crime.

A second part of the poll was a survey of government and business leaders in the seven counties, 130 people in all.

Officials perceived major changes if the project is ordered in effects on the environment, public safety and roads within the seven counties.

Many officials voiced the concern development will further endanger underground and surface water supplies and that noise and emission pollution will be a major problem in urban areas such as Phillipsburg-Easton-Stroudsburg and Port Jervis-Milford-Matamoras.

One positive outgrowth from construction of a dam would be an increase in job opportunities in the seven counties, which have a total population of 698,764 (1970).

However, with increased employment will come a bigger burden on community government services and the need for more housing in areas that are already in dire need of housing.

Where public schools fail, ESSC recruits students

EAST STROUDSBURG — If you are admitted to East Stroudsburg State college as an economically disadvantaged student, your chances of finishing a four-year education are better than if you are admitted through regular channels.

Drafting the high school students from Philadelphia are recruiters for a program at ESSC called the Center for Educational Opportunity (CEO), designed to give disadvantaged but motivated students a chance at college they otherwise would not get.

CEO Administrator Ray Gillian feels the program is succeeding and points to the student retention rates at the college: 63 per cent of the students in his program complete four years of school, while only 50 per cent of the freshmen admitted to ESSC through normal procedures finish college, he said.

The 150 students in CEO this year would not have come to ESSC if it were not for the program, Gillian said. Most have low S.A.T. (Scholastic Aptitude Test) scores and low class standings because of family and other environmental problems, and would not be admitted if those criteria alone were used.

CEO recruiters talk with Philadelphia community members, teachers and the students themselves to determine which students have the potential to benefit from and succeed in college with special help, Gillian explained.

Once admitted to ESSC, CEO students either spend 10 weeks in a summer program to improve their reading, mathematics and speech skills or begin the regular circuit in the fall.

The summer program is supposed to give students skills their high schools failed to teach them and prepare them to study at the college level, Gillian continued. Students admitted to the summer intensive study program are subsidized on the basis of their financial need.

Of the 28 students who enrolled in the trial program last summer, 25 entered as freshmen that fall.

To keep the students in school, CEO staff provides counseling, tutorial and developmental reading services and a number of social and cultural activities.

Gillian said ESSC is in effect correcting the mistakes made by the failing Philadelphia school system.

"The institution (ESSC) is asked to do developmental work by bringing these students up to par (because) the educational system has not worked for the first 18 years," he commented.

"The question many people ask is, is this the responsibility of higher education. I think it is. If we don't do anything, we will have lost a generation of potential."

The college maintains a separate minority students recruitment system to meet the requirements of desegregation laws.

$50 a mile is top pay; unless you have to swim

STROUDSBURG — Fifty dollars per mile is very good pay if you drive. But what if you swim?

Seven girls from East Stroudsburg State College's Swim Team and their coach each swam nearly three miles Sunday in a marathon to raise money to pay for a recent trip to compete in Arizona and to help purchase sporting equipment for the New Beginnings Halfway House in Stroud Township.

The residents of the rehabilitation center for alcoholics inited the girls over for dinner Thursday to express their appreciation for part of the nearly $1,200 raised.

One resident said the girls were "beautiful people. It was a beautiful thing that they did and we appreciate it very much."

Another resident, "I don't have the words to say thank you." He said the dinner was a way of expressing appreciation for being chosen to receive a portion of the proceeds.

The girls said it took an average of an hour and a half to swim the 200 laps of the college pool and that they plan a similar marathon next year with all 21 members of the swimming and diving teams participating.

Pledges were gleaned from other ESSC students, faculty, and borough residents.

According to the girls, the swim: "Made me tired;" "Made my muscles hurt;" and "Made me feel 10 pounds lighter."

The swimmers were: Kathy McGinley, Allentown, a junior; Karen Cox, Allentown; Cindy Brown, Williamsport; Connie Saksa, Havertown; Karen Linek, Kinnelon, N.J.; and Beth Downs, Willow Grove, all freshmen. Lynann Soulier of Flushing, N.Y. was injured and could not swim so her sister, Suzi Soulier, a member of the diving team, swam in her place.

Mrs. Joanne Smith, swimming coach, said she heard the halfway house needed money and so it was chosen.

Tax rate remains stable

DelVal votes $3.4 million budget

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter

MATAMORAS — Delaware Valley School Board members tentatively adopted a 1975-1976 school budget of $3,436,353 Thursday night and avoided raising taxes.

For the fifth consecutive year, the district will levy a tax of 84 mills on property and a property transfer tax of one per cent.

The proposed budget represents an increase of $534,414 over the 1974-1975 budget.

The primary reason for not raising taxes is an increase in assessment on land within the district, according to Dr. S. William Ricker, district superintendent.

Revenue expected from local real estate taxes totals $2,439,149 in the new budget, compared to $2,082,321 last year.

Other sources of revenue for the district include state aid of $633,610; federal aid of $30,000; a beginning balance of $158,594 and $175,000 in notes payable to the district.

Major budget increases listed for the upcoming school year are:

— $191,891 for teacher salary and fringe benefits raises negotiated after last September's nine-day teacher strike.

— $210,000 for purchase and interest on land planned as a site for a new elementary school.

— $20,700 increase for fuel and utilities.

— $45,000 for establishing a vocational-technical school and community college in the district.

— $42,600 salary increase for teacher's aides and clerical personnel.

The budget specifies that the $175,000 land purchase note for a proposed elementary school in Shohola Township, will be borrowed money and paid over a three-year period with $35,000 interest.

Ricker has stated that unless all approvals are obtained for the project, the money will be neither borrowed nor spent.

The proposed budget will be open for inspection from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays at the Delaware Valley School office at 105 Catherine St., Milford.

A vote to officially adopt the budget will be taken at the next school board meeting, June 11.

In other action, the board voted 7-1 against holding a public referendum on the issue of establishing a community college for the district.

Instead, they voted to approve the general concept of a community college while waiting for negotiations to end of specifics in the contract with the Northampton Area County Community College.

Beatrice Schneck, president of Concerned Parents for Quality Education, a Pike County taxpayers group, presented a petition with over 800 signatures to the board.

The petition demanded the community college issue be decided by a special referendum.

She said there are about 4,700 registered voters in the school district and "about 17.4 per cent of them felt the issue was important enough to put to a public vote."

One school board member said a public hearing was held last week on the community college proposal.

Several board members said they felt they would be abdicating their own responsibility as public officials if they held a referendum.

Only one board member, Vincent McEvoy, felt the public's desire for a vote should be honored.

Shapp signs service area health plan

HARRISBURG — Gov. Milton Shapp has approved a recommendation from the state Secretary of Health to include Monroe County in the Northeastern Pennsylvania health service area.

Shapp's approval came despite objections from local medical personnel who claimed most of the health services in Monroe County are associated with the Lehigh Valley, not the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre area.

The designation of eight health service areas now goes to the federal Department of Housing, Education and Welfare for selection of group leaders.

Robert Costello, public information officer for the health department said Sec. Leonard Bachman recommended switching Monroe County from the Bethlehem area to the Scranton region because it seemed the flow of health services should go north and to keep the county in a standard metropolitan statistical area.

Personnel at the General Hospital of Monroe County and local physicians have opposed the change saying most referrals of patients in the past have been to the Lehigh Valley.

EAST STROUDSBURG — Increasing educational costs, dwindling school supplies and Rte. 209 were some of the major topics discussed by eight East Stroudsburg Board of Education candidates who spoke to about 30 people during a candidates' night Thursday.

John Clark, an East Stroudsburg resident with two children in school, said the biggest problem the board faces "is the ever increasing cost of education per student, and to keep this problem under control requires maximum cooperation between the school board and the teachers."

The chemical engineer with Patterson-Kelley Co. Inc. of East Stroudsburg said his experience as two-time president of the Wheaton, Ill. PTA will help him solve school board problems. He has crossed filed for a six-year term.

Incumbent board member Charles Huddleston Jr., a Middle Smithfield Township resident with two children in school, said, "I'd like to see every child have an advantage and have every child participate fully in every activity in school."

The educational systems salesman crossfiled for a six-year term.

Real estate broker and appraiser Michael McKeown said he is "in favor of adult school, vocational technical school and subjects that can be used by a student when he gets into the adult world."

"I have the time to devote to the position," said the East Stroudsburg resident with one son in school. McKeown, also an incumbent, crossfiled for a six-year term.

Monroe expects more job funds

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County has received verbal confirmation that it will receive an additional $36,000 in funds under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA).

The commissioners said Thursday the money is from Title I of the CETA program, not Title VI which brought the county over $90,000 recently to pay for several jobs created by the county.

Commissioner William Quinn said he understands the money is left over from last year.

Several organizations in the county, including the Heart Association and Salvation Army, have requested the county consider using the money to hire workers to help those groups.

The commissioners said they expect written confirmation of the funds shortly.

In other action, the commissioners agreed to keep the voter registration office open until 9 p.m. Monday so persons wanting to apply for absentee ballots may do so if they will be out of the county on May 20, primary election day.

In other matters, the commissioners voted to purchase 550 copies of a book being prepared on the history of the Minisink Valley. The cost per book is not to exceed $4.

The commissioners noted that Pike County has agreed to buy 400 copies, Warren County 500, and Sussex County 550. The book is being compiled by two Monroe County CETA workers with help from researchers in the other counties.

The commissioners also approved giving $3,500 of a $7,558 appropriation to the county law library.

Kunkletown mishap hospitalizes youngster

KRESGEVILLE — A five-year-old Kunkletown R.D. 1 girl, struck by a truck early Thursday morning, was listed in guarded condition in Allentown General Hospital Thursday night after being transferred from Palmerton Hospital.

Susan Henning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil J. Henning Sr., ran in front of a truck driven by Willard Frable, 49, of Lehigh R.D. 3 on Rte. 523 in Polk Township, state police at Lehighton said. "She was apparently trying to cross the road and failed to observe the truck and ran into its path," a police spokesman said.

The girl was crossing the street to wait for a school bus at 7:35 a.m. according to police.

She was first taken to the Palmerton Hospital, with a fractured skull, leg and pelvis plus internal injuries by West End ambulance.

Area teenager hurt in accident

TANNERSVILLE — A Pocono Pines youth was seriously injured Thursday night after the car he was driving lost control, rammed into a tree and then skidded into a ditch on Camelback Road, five miles west of Tannersville.

Thomas Raymond Hutton, 16, of Pocono Pines was transferred from the General Hospital of Monroe County, East Stroudsburg, to Allentown General Hospital in guarded condition with head injuries. Hutton was eastbound on the winding, narrow road about 7:10 p.m. when the accident occurred. It is being investigated by Pocono Township police.

Fire call only fumes

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg firemen were called to 121 Broad Street Thursday night to clear a house of acrid fumes spewed by a fumigator capsule. Fire Chief Thomas Philips said there was no fire in the house, but choking, eye-burning fumes filled the building.

Grand jury reports new jail necessary

STROUDSBURG — A Monroe County Grand Jury Thursday repeated a long-standing recommendation that the county build a new jail.

Following a tour of county buildings, the grand jury said in a written statement that facilities at the jail "are antiquated and inadequate for efficient operation of a jail."

The report added that the population at the jail "far exceeds the jail capacity" and recommended that a new jail be built. In the meantime, the main cellblock and the work release section as well as the outside woodwork should be painted.

The grand jury said the jail was found to be clean.

The general condition of the county courthouse was satisfactory but a recommendation was made to install a ladies' lavatory on the main floor and do some minor painting.

Painting is also required for the veteran's building and painting of woodwork for the assessor's office. More storage space is needed for the veterans' office while the sagging second floor of the assessor's office should be repaired, the grand jury stated.

Pleasant Valley Manor was reported to be in good condi-

Scrap yard sued by Stroud

STROUDSBURG — Stroud Township Supervisors Thursday filed a civil court action requesting that Odzer's Scrap Yard on Stokes Mill Road be ordered to remove scrap metal which is partially obstructing Crowe Road.

The court action, taken by Supervisors William Crooks, J. Nelson Westbrook, and Anthony Mangan against Michael Odzer and Edward Odzer Inc., alleges the scrap yard "has usurped the roadway to the extent that a portion of the roadway... is being used for storage, collection and accumulation of junk, vehicles, scrapped motor vehicles and scrapped kitchen equipment."

The supervisors also allege that a township ordinance is being violated in that junkyards are not to constitute a nuisance or menace to the health of the community.

Lock Haven sweeps pair from Warriors, 6-2, 2-0

LOCK HAVEN — Pitchers Galen Miller and Bob Weber combined to hurl Lock Haven to a pair of baseball victories over East Stroudsburg State College Thursday, 6-2, and 2-0, in a season-ending double-header.

Miller, the team's regular third baseman, allowed only five hits and two runs. Weber spun a shutout, giving up six hits, in besting ESSC's Duane Leeper in a tight pitchers' duel.

Lock Haven went ahead for keeps in the first inning of the opener as Mike Crone walked, took second on a wild pitch, moved to third base on a grounder and scored on Dave Royer's grounder.

The Bald Eagles added another run in the second on singles by Steve Dilishen and John Jacoby and another pair of runs in the fourth on consecutive doubles by Dilishen and Jeff Kashner and then two singles by Jacoby and Mike Mersky.

ESSC's only runs of the day came in the fifth inning as Tom Mallozzi tripled following Dave Wilson's single. Leeper then drove in Mallozzi with a sacrifice fly.

Ahead 4-2, Lock Haven wrapped up the win in the sixth inning with two more runs. A walk and a hit-batsman put the runners on base and Joe Tarconish and Dave Royer delivered them with singles.

The second game was scoreless until the sixth inning. Leeper had a no-hitter for five innings and had faced only 16 batters.

Softball victory

STROUDSBURG — Jim Reynolds had a double and triple and Steve Mummaw added a triple Thursday to lead St. John's Lutheran to a 6-2 Monroe County Church League softball victory over Christ Hamilton Lutheran.

Weber was touched for hits including back-to-back singles by John Schroyer and Joe Bulzeta in the third inning and Kyle Hoar's double in the fifth. The Warriors could not move the runners to score, however.

Lock Haven finally broke through in the sixth as Mersky walked and Crone followed with his team's first hit, a double for one run. Tarconish singled Crone to third base and Royer brought him home with a sacrifice fly.

PALMERTON — Judy Fleming collected four hits and drove in four runs and Sue Schnee had three runs-batted-in Thursday as Stroudsburg belted Palmerton, 27-3, in a Lehigh Valley League softball contest.

Sally Scheller had a two-run home run in the fourth for the Mounties, while Schnee also collected three hits. Teri Griffin had two runs-batted-in for the Mounties.

Stroudsburg now is 8-1 in Lehigh Valley League play and 10-1 overall.

Cardinals, 24-0

SWIFTWATER — Cathy Russell held Jim Thorpe hitless until the seventh inning and Mimi Mader drove in four runs Thursday to lead Pocono Mountain to a 24-0 softball victory over Jim Thorpe.

Russell held the Olympians hitless until she gave up three hits in the seventh, but saved her shutout. She also belted a two-run home run in the sixth with Terri Nash on board.

Nash drove in three runs for the Cardinals, now 4-3.

Attack fatal to ex-Olympic committee chief Brundage

BONN (UPI) — Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee for 20 years until 1972, died Thursday in the West German town of Garmisch-Partenkirchen. He was 87.

Brundage, an engineer by profession who spent his life fighting to free amateur sports from politics and professionalism and who earned as many epithets as awards for the effort, died in a hospital at the German ski resort town of Garmisch-Partenkirchen, 49 miles south of Munich, near the Austrian border.

The hospital staff, who reported his death, declined to cite the cause of death. His housekeeper in Chicago said she had received word Brundage had died.

Brundage left his home in Chicago for Germany on March 9 to join his bride, a 39-year-old German princess.

His housekeeper said he was

in good health when he left for Germany and that he had been scheduled to return on April 12. "At one time or another, I've been called a capitalist, a Communist, a socialist, a fascist and a lot of other things that are unprintable," Brundage once said.

"Kinder people have called me the last living amateur and I'm proud of that. The defense of an idea is more important than popularity."

The determination of the self-made Chicago millionaire to defend the purity of amateur athletics involved him in controversy as early as 1920, when he had the American track and field championships moved from New Orleans because the organizers refused to let blacks compete.

Brundage, as chairman of the U.S. Olympic Committee, insisted that the American team go to the 1936 games in Nazi Germany and persuaded Adolf Hitler to add a Jewish woman fencer to his all-Aryan team. The same year he announced the decision to expel Eleanor Holm from the U.S. team for drinking champagne on the ship to Europe, a decision so unpopular it helped her become a movie star.

By the time of the Munich Olympics of 1972, Brundage, at one time or another, had earned the wrath of the Russians and East Europeans for giving them only nine seats on the 70-member committee; had been accused by the U.S. State Department of buckling to "Communist pressure" for throwing the Nationalist Chinese out of the Olympics in 1959 and not letting them back in until they were willing to call themselves "Taiwan;" had made sporting equipment manufacturers remove trademarks from Olympic equipment; and had fought unsuccessfully to get South Africa's 1968 team and Rhodesia's 1972 team admitted to the Olympics after fighting successfully to get blacks included on those two teams.

Flyers beaten; Sabres oust Canadians, 4-3

Islanders alive and kicking, 5-1

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The New York Islanders, again refusing to be counted out of a series in which they were far behind, defeated the Philadelphia Flyers 5-1 Thursday night to cut their deficit to 3-2 in the Stanley Cup semifinals.

The Islanders scored in every period and their defense bottled up the Flyers, defending Stanley Cup champions, to give New York hope that they might repeat their come-from-behind performance in the quarterfinals when, after losing the first three games to Pittsburgh, they went on to win the series to become only the second team in Stanley Cup history to sweep the last four games.

The sixth game will be played on the Islanders' home ice Sunday afternoon and the winner of the series will play Buffalo in the finals.

The Islanders scored in the first period on a goal by J. P. Parise which came at 14:19 on a power play with the Flyers' Dave Schultz in the penalty box for a meaningless and easily detected slashing.

The Islanders' defense held Philadelphia to only seven shots on goal in the first period with the Flyers not getting their first until 9:28 had elapsed. The first score was the Islanders' only power play of the period but they managed to bombard goalie Bernie Parent with three shots within 39 seconds.

Despite an increased Flyers' attack in the second period, New York scored twice in that stanza, the first coming when Billy Harris fired a shot from the blue line which Parent gloved but then dropped into the net at 14:23. It was only the Islanders' second shot on goal in the period.

Then at 17:35 of the same period, Jude Drouin, weaved past several Flyers to go one-on-one on Parent to the right

Sabres, 4-3

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Buffalo Sabres got first period goals from Craig Ramsay, Rick Martin and Peter McNab Thursday night to advance into the Stanley Cup finals for the first time in their five-year history by taking the best-of-seven semifinal series four games to two as they defeated the Montreal Canadiens 4-3.

Buffalo will meet the winner of the Philadelphia-New York Islanders series in the Cup finals.

The Sabres were playing a man short at 2:05 of the first period when Ramsay beat Montreal goalie Ken Dryden to the puck in the corner of the rink. Ramsay then fired a shot into the empty Montreal net.

Martin's 20-footer beat Dryden at 8:51 but less than a minute later, the Canadiens got on the scoreboard when Peter Mahovlich scored the first of side of the net and score. The Islanders' Bob Nystrom got his first goal of the playoffs in the third period when he stole the puck at the Flyers' blue line and went straight in on Parent on a breakaway.

The Flyers got their only goal at 15:10 of the final period when Bob Kelly fired a shot past goalie Glenn Resch from about 25 feet out.

New York's Garry Howatt ended the scoring at 18:22.

Don't underestimate Mounties' LVL track chances

Leighton and Emmaus stand out as the obvious favorites in Saturday's 29th annual Lehigh Valley League Track and Field Championships.

But don't underestimate Stroudsburg's chance to pull off an upset.

The Mounties, who are hosting the meet which begins at 10 a.m. at East Stroudsburg State College, have a trio of top-seeded performers in Frank Bell, Tom Blair, and Tom DeSchraver.

On paper, all three athletes appear unbeatable by Saturday's competition.

Blair, the Mounties' senior discus ace who seems to set a new record every time he competes, has an excellent shot at the existing meet mark of 156-3 established last year.

Blair's best toss was a 165 at last weekend's Emery Relays. A similar effort Saturday would give him a new meet record with plenty to spare.

Bell holds the meet record for the shot put with a distance of 58-2½, and although he may have trouble matching that mark on Saturday, he still stands out as the class of the field.

Bell has been rounding into shape after undergoing a knee operation five weeks ago, but coach Dick Griffin feels he's reached his peak.

"Frank's been giving up some distance to work on

By JOE DeVIVO
Record Sports Writer

Spotlight on Sports

form," Griffin said. "He threw 54-9 on his first throw at the Emery Relays and then worked on form, but he was beaten with a 55-foot throw."

Bell and Blair form two-thirds of the Mounties' outstanding depth in the discus and shot.

Along with Tony Posten, the pair combine to give the Mounties the first, third and fourth seeds in the shot and first, fifth, and sixth seeds in the discus.

As Griffin points out, "there's only four kids in the Lehigh Valley League who've thrown over 50 feet in the shot and we've got three of them. There's a good possibility we can place all three in the top five."

Stroudsburg's other top prospect is sophomore distance runner Tom DeSchraver.

DeSchraver was unbeaten in the mile in league competition and is the fourth seed in the two-mile. Griffin feels DeSchraver has a good chance not only to win both events, but to do so in record-breaking time.

"I think Tommy has a crack at both the mile and two-mile," Griffin said. "4:29 (the mile record) isn't out of his reach by any means and neither is the 9:59.5 in the two-mile."

DeSchraver's best time in the two-mile is a 9:40 and he completed the distance in 9:49 last weekend at the Emery Relays. His best time for the mile is 4:36.

Outside of these outstanding performers, the Mounties' best shot will probably be in the 100-yard dash, where Griffin has underclassmen Craig Price, Rod Baechtold, and Bob Tilwick.

"All three kids could get into the finals without too much of a problem," Griffin said. "There's only two kids on the seed list they haven't beaten at one time or another. (Jan Krawchuk of Palmerton and Cameron Paine of Emmaus.)"

The other key areas where the Mounties could score some points are the mile and two-mile relays, the high jump, and the pole vault.

Sophomore Joe Griffin, who has cleared six feet in the high jump, is fourth seeded. John Keiper, who holds the Stroudsburg school record for the pole vault with a 12-9, is the third seed.

The two-mile relay squad shapes up as freshmen Bruce Sibum, Dan Brodhead, and Bill Carrescia and senior Jim Altomose.

Brian Jaggard, Brad Stoddard, Rick Anglemeyer, and either Craig Price or Bob Tilwick, will carry the lead in the mile relay, an event the Mounties have won seven times in the meet's history.

Because of the all-weather track at ESSC, meet records in all of the running events and the triple and long jumps, which benefit from the all-weather runway, are in danger of falling.

Although Leighton was the regular season champion, Griffin views Emmaus as the key team to watch.

"I've got to favor Emmaus with Leighton a close second," Griffin said. "Leighton has good top people, but Emmaus has the depth. They've got two or three people in every event."

Griffin's not discounting his own team's chances. "I'm definitely not excluding us," he added.

Since the Lehigh Valley League is disbanding after this season, Saturday's meet will be the circuit's grand finale.

In 28 previous meets, the Mounties have never finished first. Griffin and his Mounties would like nothing better.

Outstanding fieldman Jenkins leads contingent

ESSC thinclads in conference track

EAST STROUDSBURG — Lenny Jenkins, voted the conference's outstanding fieldman the last two years, will lead East Stroudsburg State College in the annual Pennsylvania Conference Track and Field Championships today and Saturday at Slippery Rock.

Jenkins has won the triple jump and long jump the last two years. He was the PC's first triple winner in 17 years last season as he also captured the pole vault.

The senior from Reading, will be aiming to increase his own conference triple jump record of 49-1½ into the 50-foot range. His best is 51-7¼ and he has placed third in the Penn Relays the last two years.

In the long jump, Jenkins will be seeking to break the PC mark of 23-10½ established by Russ Hopewell of ESSC in 1962. He has gone 24-1 during his career, but he is seeded only second in the event behind Lynwood Loper of Cheyney who has leaped 24-8½.

Jenkins is not competing in the pole vault this season. He is running the anchor leg on the school's 440-yard relay team, however.

The Warriors have two other strong contenders for individual championships in distance runner Pete Heesen and shot putter Paul Ferency.

Heesen will be one of the favorites in the 3000-meter steeplechase in which he was third last year. He has the conference's best time of 9:07.6 set in the Penn Relays.

The sophomore from Ardley, Pa., also will be entered in the three mile run in which he has done 14:19.0, second best in the conference.

Ferency, a freshman from Easton, became ESSC's first 50-foot shot putter this season with a distance of 50-1. He has broken the school record four times indoors and five times outdoors and is seeded second behind Rich Krankota of Slippery Rock, 52-6.

The 440-yard relay team of Grey Seamans, Gary Jackson, Frank Kelly and Jenkins also may be a title threat. The team has done 42.7 which ranks among the conference's best.

Coach Dick DeSchraver has a number of other team members who may place, but he feels it will take an outstanding effort for the team to finish in the top five.

Defending champion Edinboro is considered the favorite to repeat followed by Indiana, Slippery Rock, Bloomsburg and Millersville. The Warriors were third last year. Seamans, who has run 49.1, may join Barry Purvis, fourth last year, in the finals of the 440. Dennis Scudder is seeded in the tip six in the 120-yard high hurdles. Captian Dave Posey was fourth last year in both the 120 high and 440 intermediate hurdles.

Other possible place-winners in field events include Mike Rubin in the shot put, 47-8½; Gary Guernacini, 200-6, and John Stevens in the javelin; Dave Strein, 14-0, in the pole vault; and Joe Manz, 6-4, and Will VanNatta in the high jump.

7 area top qualifiers in 'Colonial' track

NAZARETH — Seven area athletes are among the top qualifiers for the first annual Colonial League track meet to be held at Andrew S. Leh Stadium beginning at 3:30 p.m. today.

The event will be the first tournament in any sport conducted by the fledgling league since the start of league competition in March.

Curt Lane of Bangor in the 220-yard dash, Dave Lugg of Pen Argyl in the 440, Pen Argyl's Chuck Austin in the javelin, Morris Pagni of Pen Argyl in the discus, Rich Ede of Pen Argyl in the shot put, Bangor's Don Miller in the triple jump and Pen Argyl's Jeff

Mountie juniors nip Cavaliers

STROUDSBURG — Greg Miller had a two-run triple and Stroudsburg came from five runs down Thursday to nip East Stroudsburg, 11-10, in a junior varsity baseball contest.

Greg Beck had a two-run triple for the Cavaliers, while Marshall Angradi, Jamie Kresge, Dave Burkhart and Jay Smith each had two hits and scored two runs for Stroudsburg.

Frailey's two-run double deciding hit

Mounties nip Bombers in eighth

PALMERTON — Glen Frailey belted a two-run double in the eighth inning after Stroudsburg had tied the score with a run in the seventh Thursday to give the Mounties a 3-1 Lehigh Valley League victory over Palmerton.

In the eighth, Jeff Wert walked and advanced on Dan Schaller's single. Frailey then doubled for the deciding runs. Mickey Carey got the victory in relief.

The Mounties had tied the score at 1-1 in the seventh when Foust singled, moved to second on a wild pitch by loser Smokey Everett, third on Dave Hubbell's fly to right and scored on another wild pitch.

Palmerton scored first when it tallied a run in the first when Jim Kurtz singled, took second on Foust's wild pitch and scored on Kerry Solt's single.

Stroudsburg is now 7-3 in league play and 8-4 overall.

Spartans, 3-2

EAST STROUDSBURG — Mike Riley pitched a four-hitter and fanned eight and drove in a run in a two-run third inning that gave Notre Dame its final margin Thursday as the Spartans beat North Warren, 3-2.

Riley walked three and gave up both North Warren runs in the fourth inning as Jeff Smol-ha walked, John Delaney singled and Warren Guiler tripled them home.

The first Notre Dame run came in the second inning when Jeff Sobrinski led off with a triple and scored on Matt Tolan's sacrifice fly.

Notre Dame scored its final two runs, eventually the margin of victory, in the third as Dick Quaresimo reached on an error, stole second and scored on Riley's bloop single to right. Sobrinski then reached first on an error and then stole second, with the throw to second sailing into center field to score Riley.

Fisher took the 220, 440 and long jump, while Warner won the 880 and mile and Smith won the pole vault and tied for first in a dead heat in the high jump with the Tigers' Steve Anderson.

Other Bears taking firsts were Dale Heller in the 100 and the mile relay team of Doug Dunay, Bill Brown and Bob and Ron Zipp. The victory gave Pleasant Valley a 9-2 mark.

Two baseball players, Dean Borger and Guy Morfesi, placed in the meet as Pleasant Valley was short on performers. Borger took a second in the shot and Morfesi was third in the discus.

Pocono Catholic scored three in the first when Tierney reached first on an error, stole second, took third when Fran Regan reached on an error and scored with Regan on Joe Hardy's double. Hardy then stole third and scored on Tim O'Boyle's double.

Tierney scored the Kingsmen's fourth run when he singled, went to third on a two-base error on the hit and scored on Hardy's sacrifice fly.

Accidents mar Monaco Grand Prix time trials

MONTE CARLO (UPI) — Ferrari, bidding for its first win here in 20 years, set the fastest times Thursday in the opening day trials for Sunday's Monaco Formula One Grand Prix.

Austria's Niki Lauda unofficially broke the lap record for the two mile circuit with a time of one minute 27.16 seconds at 84.5 miles per hour before crashing his Italian machine into a wall alongside the municipal swimming pool.

Lauda immediately stepped into a spare machine to clock a second fastest 1:27.62.

His Swiss teammate Clay Regazzoni earlier came to grief at the same spot. He bounced off a guard rail and spun into the center of the track where John Watson's Surtees hit him head-on. Neither driver was hurt, and Regazzoni also climbed into a spare car to clock 1:27.70.

Lella Lombardi, the first woman to drive in Formula One since the early 1950s, crashed her March in the Casino Square but walked unharmed back to the pits.

Following the Spanish Grand Prix crash two weeks ago which killed five persons on a similar city circuit in Barcelona, the Monaco organizers have limited the starters for Sunday's race to 18 because of the narrowness of the track. There were 26 cars on the track Thursday and the remaining two days of trials will see intense competition among the slower drivers to make the grade.

The two U.S. teams both look to be safe qualifiers. Mario Andretti took the Parnelli around in 1:28.98, but Mark Donohue, driving the twisty Monaco track for the first time, clocked 1:28.38, seventh fastest for the day.

"It is tough for us," said Donohue. "We've got a new team, new car, new driver and a new circuit."

Sweden's Ronnie Peterson, winner here last year, came the closest to catching the two Ferraris. He clocked 1:27.93, and like all drivers pronounced the circuit "very safe."

Michel Boeri, president of the Monaco Auto Club, said more than $80,000 had been spent in the past two weeks to modify the course to make it safer.

Carlos Pace, who won the Brazilian Grand Prix in front of his home crowd, was fourth fastest in the Brabham in 1:27.95 followed in 1:27.96 by the Tyrrell of Jody Scheckter, who emulated Pace by winning his home Grand Prix in South Africa.

"The car is going well. It is set up just right but the gears will have to be changed tonight," said Pace.

Emerson Fittipaldi, who goes into the fifth round of the world championship leading in the drivers standings by three points, did not have much success in a McLaren and was only 16th fastest with a time of 1:29.72.

"We had a lot of problems with the front suspension," said the Brazilian world champion. "I never really got going because the front end was breaking away and I spent a lot of time in the pits."

His brother Wilson, driving the all-Brazilian Copersucar, could only manage 1:33.18 for 23rd best time and will have to improve by at least five seconds to be sure to qualify.

Jochen Mass of West Germany, in a second McLaren, also had problems with the front suspension but managed 1:28.61 for the ninth best time.

Reading modifieds

READING — Dick Tobias, who has won three of the last five Reading Stock Car Assn. modified features, looks very much like the man to beat tonight when promoter Lindy Vicari offers the first of a pair of weekend programs at the Reading Fairgrounds.

Tobias, of Lebanon, is a three-time point champion and he's the current point leader. He won last Friday night in a good race with Kenny Brightbill, the defending champion, and in the races he didn't win during the last five, Toby finished second and fourth.

Friday's card will get under way at 8:15 p.m. and the top drivers in the East will be on hand in quest of the winner's share of $1,000.

There will be a trio of 10-lap qualifying heats and a 10-lap consolation with a minimum field of 24 getting the call in the 35-lap main event.

Tobias and Kenny Weld lead in feature wins this season with four while Brightbill, who led all drivers with 23 wins in 1974, has picked up the checkered flag only once.

Saturday night will be the rain date and a second program will be held on Sunday night and it will start at 7:30 p.m.

Among the challengers today will be Bobby Braxton, who was third last Friday; Fred Adam, Johnny Botz, Jim Keppley, Jim Baker, Bobby Hauer, three-time point champion Gerry Chamberlain, Hal Browning, Harry Moore, Laudan Potts and many more.

Aside from the handsome chunk of cash, the feature winner will get 150 points.

early, he appears headed for his fourth.

The veterans, who missed a couple of years of RSCA competition while driving USAC sprints, shows a total of 1395 and he is comfortably ahead of defending champion Kenny Brightbill who has 1070.

Johnny Botz, who won 13 features last season and has a victory this season, is third with 900 and Jim Keppley, still looking for his first win of the year, is fourth with 870. Kenny Weld, with four wins, is fifth and he has 840.

Others in the top 10 are: Jim Baker and Red Coffin, 785 each; three-time champion Gerry Chamberlain, 735, and Bob Hauer and Bobby Braxton, 685 each.

Brewers send Coluccio to ChiSox for Sharp

Braves to release former Met Gentry

ATLANTA (UPI) — The injury-plagued major league pitching career of Atlanta Braves' righthander Gary Gentry appeared at an end Thursday.

The Braves announced they were placing the 29-year-old Gentry on waivers in order that they might give him his outright release.

Gentry had a 1-1 record this season with a 4.95 earned run average after appearing in seven games. He started two games and pitched 20 innings. Tuesday night Gentry gave up five hits and three runs in one inning in relief in his final appearance for the Braves.

"We have observed Gentry closely since his arm operation

(in 1974)," said Braves' General Manager Eddie Robinson in making the announcement. "He does not appear to have any pain, but he has not lived up to expectations. We prefer to give a younger player a chance to pitch."

Gentry spent his first four major league seasons with the New York Mets and was traded in November, 1972, along with relief pitcher Danny Frisella, to Atlanta for second baseman Felix Millan and pitcher George Stone.

Gentry has a major league record of 46 wins, 49 losses but is only 5-7 since joining the Braves. Last season, he appeared in only three games before being sidelined by his arm injury. His best major league season was 1971 when he was 12-11 with the Mets.

Outfielder swap

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Bob Coluccio, benched because of weak hitting before Wednesday night's game against the Detroit Tigers, was traded Thursday by the Milwaukee Brewers for Chicago White Sox outfielder Bill Sharp.

"Coluccio has been really good for us defensively, but we don't feel we'll be hurt there," Brewers' Manager Del Crandall said in Detroit. "The way things were going for Coluccio, we feel we'll get more offense from Sharp. Besides, Sharp is a lefthanded hitter, which gives us more balance."

Coluccio, 23, has been a regular since 1973. But he batted only .224 his rookie year and .223 last year. This season he has hit only .194.

Sharp, 25, a former Ohio State star, hit .276 in 1973 with Chicago and last year batted .333 with Iowa of the American Association and .253 in 100 games with the Sox. He has batted just 35 times this year with a .200 average.

Crandall said Sharp would start in centerfield for Milwaukee.

"I think a lot of us were impressed with his approach to the game and defensive skills when we saw him the past couple of years," Crandall said. "We had to be very sure he could play centerfield before we traded for him."

Rankin has favorite's role in 'Lady Tara' tournament

ATLANTA (UPI) — Judy Rankin figures she's got the odds on her side for this week's stop on the LPGA tour, the Lady Tara Classic just north of Atlanta.

After all, she tied for first both two weeks ago at Ft. Worth, Tex., and last week at Birmingham, Ala., losing in playoffs both times.

That brought Mrs. Rankin, winner of two tournaments in 1974 and sixth on the LPGA's all-time money list, to Atlanta still seeking her first 1975 victory despite finishing in the top 10 in six of the eight tournaments she has entered.

Those high finishes has helped furnish the 30-year-old

Mrs. Rankin, a tiny blonde who lives in Midland, Tex., with career earnings of close to $300,000.

But Mrs. Rankin has more than the odds to battle in the $40,000 Lady Tara Classic which begins its 54-hole run Friday on the 6,345-yard, par 73 Indian Hills Country Club course.

Most of the other top names of the LPGA tour are in the field of nearly 100 women golfers. The only notable absenteees are Sandra Haynie, fourth on this year's money list and the lady who won that playoff at Ft. Worth; and Carol Mann, twice a winner in Atlanta when the LPGA tournament here was being played on a course on the opposite side of the city.

The top three money winners have to be rated co-favorites with Mrs. Rankin. Leading money winner Sandra Palmer has already earned more than $40,000 this year, and runnerup Jane Blalock is a two-time winner in this tournament. Kathy McMullen is currently third on the money list despite being a non-winner like Mrs. Rankin.

With the absent Sandra Haynie, the only lady to win two tournaments this year, there really isn't a clear cut favorite. Defending champ Sandra Spuzich is presently 42nd on the money list and last week's playoff winner in Birmingham, Maria Astorloges, hasn't played especially well otherwise.

Not much talk about Vietnam debacle

MUNCIE, Ind. (UPI) — People don't talk much about Vietnam in Muncie. The town has troubles of its own.

There is regret, relief, bitterness, even some shame and sense of guilt in this city of 81,000 which has come to be known as "Middletown, U.S.A." That is, when Muncieites feel like talking about Vietnam at all. Mostly, they don't.

As South Vietnam collapsed, the predominate talk in Muncie was of the 11.5 per cent unemployment rate in town, spring downpours that kept the farmers out of the fields, inflation, the soaring cost of electricity, layoffs and call-backs at the factories, how long sub pay will hold out for the idled, and why Muncie North High School stumbled on its way to what was expected to be a state basketball championship.

As for Vietnam, people seemed bone weary glad it was over and hopeful America would now start worrying about places like Muncie.

This reporter was in Muncie to talk about Vietnam with the same persons who were interviewed earlier in the year on the general view of the nation and the world from Muncie.

Muncie was chosen because it has been regarded as a Middle America test tube city ever since the 1920s and a book about Muncie called "Middletown", the first strictly scientific study of a relatively small American community.

Now Muncieites read their newspapers, listened to the news on television, and generally turned to other things.

Some would talk at length about Vietnam if pressed, revealing a deep sense of nothing accomplished, of loss of lives, pride and treasure. There were words such as "idiotic," "stupid," "tragic," "useless."

A basically conservative community, Muncie angrily questioned U.S. motives in entering Vietnam and in staying there after rejecting an all-out bid for victory which many in Muncie thought could have been won.

There was grudging approval by most, but not all, of shipping Vietnam orphans and refugees to the United States, although nobody particularly wanted any of them in job-short Muncie.

Muncie and surrounding Delaware County sent 1,765 men and women to the Vietnam theater and at least 44 of them didn't come back. One was Air Force Capt. Glendon Ammon, shot down over Vietnam in 1966, reportedly seen on the ground but not heard from since.

His mother and brother believe Ammon is still somewhere in Asia, alive and forgotten by his country.

His brother, Robert, said, "When they say Vietnam is over for America, there's MIA families who haven't put Vietnam behind us. I've got a 14-year-old son and if something ever happens like this again I don't want my country deserting him like it has my brother."

Nobody seems to tell war stories in Muncie, although there are plenty of Vietnam veterans around.

One flatly refused to talk about it. Another, Mike Wood, 25 and unemployed, said, "I look back on it and I see 19 months spent over there and 40 months total in the service and wonder what I really accomplished, if anything.

"I think this is one of the big points with all of the veterans that don't talk about it, that they don't think anything was accomplished. I don't think anything was accomplished other than stimulating the economy for a while. The general public was conned."

Grover Robert Cunningham, 47, ruminated over the war and Muncie as he built a giant chef's salad in a turkey broiler on a Sunday afternoon in his kitchen.

"What people tell me is, 75 per cent think get the hell out of there and stay out of there," he said. "We've got enough problems right here in the United States."

John Hampton, 45, was working in his law office that afternoon.

"I don't think people give a damn, really," he said. "I think the most prevalent feeling you could find would be, 'take care of our own troubles and the hell with the rest of the world.' I think the average guy and woman would say, 'Look, we've got problems. We've got people who are having trouble buying groceries.'"

Other viewpoints from Muncie:

Keith Hollars, 35, assembly line worker at the Delco Batteries plant, back from a six-week layoff:

"We wonder why in the hell these people hate us. We think, 'We're doing so much for them so why do they hate us?' And, really, if you stop and look it's no wonder they hate us."

"We don't even take care of our own and here we're out trying to tell someone else how to do it. When you have a fight with your wife you don't want someone coming over and telling you how to win the war, do you? We went over there to try to break up what amounts to a family squabble."

Morton Rosenberg, 44, professor of American history at Ball State University in Muncie:

"One of the cliches you pick up in history is that when you win a war it's a good war and when you lose the war it's a bad war."

"I suspect that had we won a clearcut victory and dictated peace from Hanoi, bingo, we wouldn't say we were wrong. But from a philosophical or moral standpoint we were wrong, we probably were; even if we'd won we probably were wrong."

Cunningham: "It's like back when Muhammad Ali wouldn't go into the Army and everybody was giving him hell, wasn't they? Now I'd say half the people say he was right. I was drafted in World War II and went, but I had tears in my eyes seeing my son go to the draft board this time (young Cunningham was rejected with a heart murmur)."

Farmer Warren Groscoast, 35: "It was just a police action, helped out the rich, made the rich richer and the poor poorer. You take all the factories making gears and artillery parts, you know it really made them smile a little longer."

Harold Truelock, editor of the Muncie Press:

"There are still those who contend, and I go along with them to some extent, that the war could have been won if we had carried it to North Vietnam. Now there's just relief and there's still bitterness."

"I think if there had been less corruption in the South Vietnam government there would have been more all out enthusiasm. That disillusioned people here as much as anything."

Muncie did not always feel this way about Vietnam. And there was a time a good many people in town made money out of the war.

There weren't any war protests in Muncie to speak of, despite the presence of 18,000 Ball State students. Strangely, the town's feelings toward the war began to change in the late 1960s, when most people in Muncie may have been deploring demonstrations elsewhere. As the casualty reports came in and Richard Nixon promised peace with honor, they began asking themselves questions.

As for making money, Muncie Star Editor Wiley W. Spurgeon recalled, "Sure. Muncie Gear had 700 people making rocket parts at one time. I'd say there were a thousand or fifteen hundred mobilization-oriented jobs here, during '66 and '67 particularly. Those jobs disappeared, they were absorbed. But they were a factor." Hampton begged, "Give us a little breather, a little chance to restore some pride that we may have had trampled a bit. I think that's going to happen."

TAURUS

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Things should be fairly stable in both your business and personal life now. Incentive and ambition, teamed up, should help to bring ultimate objectives more clearly in focus.
TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Avoid a tendency toward impulsiveness. In moments of stress, slow down — rather than take steps to a position from which it may be hard to extricate yourself.
GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Generous Mercury influences stimulate your ingenuity and imagination. Use both well and results will please. Reach for the unusual; study new trends.
CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — You can advance through association with those who stimulate your thinking and imagination — especially if aims and objectives are mutual.
LEO (July 24 to August 23) — New and unusual ideas, thoughtfully carried out, could bring gains. A good period, also, for making long-range plans.
VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Pleasing recognition for your work on a recent project now raises your self-esteem and gives you a warm glow of satisfaction.
LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Curb emotions and do not let sympathy for one cause blind you to the attributes of another. Take care of undertakings in order, but without anxiety.
SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — Mixed influences. Your efforts may not show immediate returns. They will, however strengthen your current status. Stress accuracy, precision.
SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — There may be more than one way to achieve your goal, so keep eyes and ears open. Generally speaking, the strong and decisive try will pay off.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — As the week draws to a close, prepare to revive depleted energies, dwindling resources. Rekindle an optimistic outlook toward the future.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — You usually like to solve your own problems, but don't arbitrarily reject another's idea. It may be more practical than your own.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Mixed influences. Be prompt to reject unethical, or even slightly questionable schemes. Too much is at stake; too much can get out of hand.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with fine discrimination, unusual business acumen and great versatility along artistic lines. You could write, paint or become an outstanding success as an entertainer — either in the musical or dramatic field.

Bidding quiz

You are South and have the following hand:
♠K6 ♥83 ♦AK952 ♣AQJ4

1. The bidding has gone:
South 1♦ North 1♥
What would you bid now?
2. The bidding has gone:
North 1♠ South 2♦
2NT 3♣
3NT ?
What would you bid now?
3. The bidding has gone:
North 1♥ South 2♦
1♥ 2♣
What would you bid now?
* * *

1. Four notrump. Slam is a virtual certainty — you have 17 high-card points instead of the 13 you might have had for your first two bids, and you also have good suit controls as well as excellent trumps. The chief purpose of the Blackwood bid is to cover the remote possibility that partner has no aces. You plan to bid six clubs if partner shows either one or two aces.
Alternatively, you could bid six clubs over four, which is a less elegant but more definitive choice. This does not bar partner from going on to a grand slam if he has the perfect hand that includes the ace of spades, A-K of hearts and king of clubs.
2. Pass. You've made two slam tries and partner has turned a deaf ear to both of them. If you have faith in partner, you must pass, as you have no values beyond those already expressed. It is reasonable to think that North is as anxious as you are to reach a makeable slam, and his two discouraging rebids make it perfectly clear that there is only a game in the hand.
3. Four hearts. Obviously, North had a skimpy opening bid and is willing to play the hand under game. But just as obviously, your hand is much too good to justify a less-than-game contract and the only problem is to find the best spot.
North having bid hearts three times, indicating at least six of them, your 8-3 constitute adequate trump support. You could of course bid three notrump, but four hearts is likely to be a safer contract.

Dow advances 4.06

NEW YORK (UPI) — Overcoming profit taking and the effects of a wholesale price index rise, prices forged out a small gain Thursday in fairly active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fluctuated most of the day, gained 4.06 to 840.50. It had been about a point higher at the outset, then off almost five points during the afternoon.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 0.48 to 89.46. The average price of an NYSE common share increased 20 cents. Advances topped declines, 969 to 479, among the 1,811 issues crossing the tape.

Volume totaled 22,980,000 shares, compared with 22,250,000 traded Wednesday.

Many analysts said the market gained strength in the afternoon when the Federal Reserve Board stepped in to drive down Treasury bill rates. The Fed, has followed an accommodative policy to keep interest rates low.

After the market closed, the Fed reported the nation's money supply increased during the latest reporting period and loan demands at New York's leading banks increased slightly.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fuel, North American Coal, Kennecott and Bates Manufacturing a point or more each.

Marathon Oil gained 1 1/2. Some analysts said Marathon's earnings could be helped if the company settles some ownership disputes at the Yates oil field in Texas. Phillips Petroleum and California Standard, which own pieces of the field, were point-sized gainers.

Ohio Standard, a major holder of Prudhoe Bay natural gas, lost 1 1/2. The Alaska House of Representatives voted a property tax on the gas and oil reserves there even before they are due to be shipped.

Boise Cascade gained 3/4. The company raised its dividend to 16 1/2 cents a share from 12 1/2 cents. However, the company said its earnings are expected to decline this year.

M. Lowenstein lost 1 after reporting lower first quarter earnings. Singer Co. gained 1 1/2. The company predicted it would have higher second quarter and second half earnings.

Revere Copper gained 1 1/2 and TRE Corp. 3/4. Neither company knew of any reason for the gains.

American Telephone & Telegraph warrants (trading next day delivery) led the Big Board actives, up 1 to 6 1/2 on 290,200 shares.

Among the glamors, ARA Services gained 2 1/2, Avon Products 2 1/2 and Polaroid, Revlon and Coca-Cola a point or more each.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share gained six cents. Volume totaled 2,830,000 shares, compared with 2,460,000 Wednesday.

A cystoscopy is painless

I have been told that I might need a cystoscopy. I dread it because I understand it's very painful.

Mr. T.J., Mich.

Dear Mr. J.:

I am always confused when I hear a patient say that "I might need" a cystoscopy, or

"I might need" some other procedure.

Rarely do doctors project fear into their patients simply by suggesting the possibility of a procedure. If it has to be done, it has to be done! If it doesn't have to be done, it doesn't have to be done!

There is no need for a patient to live in terror about something that may not even happen.

Should cystoscopy be necessary for you, it can be performed painlessly under local or general anesthesia. Modern techniques eliminate the distress that formerly was associated with cystoscopy.

A cystoscope is an instrument which is inserted into the bladder by way of the urethra, the tiny tube from which the urine passes.

By looking through the instrument it is possible to examine the bladder for inflammation and in men, for the size of the prostate gland.

Urine cultures for bacteriological examination and biopsies of tissue can also be made through the cystoscope.

Let me again assure you that it is the fear of the unknown, rather than actual cystoscopy itself, which is so disturbing to you.

Likes furry legs

UNSHAVEN: (Q.) I think it would be fascinating to have a girl with furry legs — a girl who doesn't shave. All these dumb girls in my high school shave their legs.

I have not found any girl I have dated that will stop shaving her legs for me. Can you give me any suggestions? A girl with furry legs could really turn me on.

Hunting in Mississippi

(A.) Shaving the legs is merely a custom for women — just as shaving the face is for men. Along with the increase in male beards, we may soon see a decrease in women shaving their legs. In fact, a number of women's liberationists are refusing to shave, and unshaven legs are common in Europe.

Until high school girls in general change their ways, you are not likely to find one who doesn't shave. In hunting for a girl, however, there are many factors more important to look for than whether or not the girl shaves her legs.

NO MORE: (Q.) Peg and I went together for three years. We loved each other. Then last summer she and her family when she came back she told when she came back she told me we weren't going together any longer.

She didn't tell me why. I have tried everything, but she won't go out with me. Can you help me?

Still Hoping in Pennsylvania

(A.) Yes, but not to get Peg back. I can help you by assuring you that it is over, and you are spinning your wheels trying to change that fact. Spend some effort where it may count — on some other girl.

Inventory buildup deceived economists

By JAMES P. GANNON
Dow Jones-Ortaway News
(This is the second of a two-part series)

Although consumer markets had been sluggish since late 1973, the recession message did not really get through to most businessmen until autumn.

"They just did not see the recession because they were selling to each other," explains David Grove, chief economist for International Business Machines Corp.

"They were not looking at the consumer, they were looking at all the orders from other producers." With profits holding high and orders strong, he says, "businessmen were misled into thinking, 'what recession?'"

Spurred by fears of shortages, a stream of materials-price increases and their own inflation-distorted profits and sales figures, businessmen kept building up inventories. "The inventory accumulation was stupendous," says Raymond J. Saulnier, chief White House economist under President Eisenhower. "And it was all obscured by totally misleading inventory statistics."

In July, the Commerce Department reported that it had massively underestimated the pileup of inventories in 1973 and early 1974.

Its revised figures showed that inventory building in 1973 had been double its earlier estimate and that inventory accumulation in the first quarter of 1974 ran at a dangerously high $16.9 billion annual rate, rather than a $5.5 billion rate as previously thought.

"Overnight, we went from a position of saying that there was no inventory overhang to saying that we've got the biggest overhang in year," Grove of IBM says. "It became clear that we were going to have a humdinger of an inventory correction." And that means a deep recession. "This is one of the reasons the slide is so steep now," Grove adds, "because it is a delayed reaction."

In other words, if businesses had gradually lowered production last year in line with weakening consumer buying, the collapse in autumn could have been avoided.

The forces building toward an economic bust were strongly reinforced by government policies in 1974. Horrified by the eruption of double-digit inflation, officials of the Ford Administration and the Federal Reserve Board decided to risk a recession in adopting restrictive fiscal and monetary policies to halt the price spiral.

Herbert Stein, who resigned as chief White House economist last September, told Congress in mid-1974 that strong restraint must be used to subdue inflation, "even at the risk of possibly leaning too far" toward recession.

Now a professor at the University of Virginia, Stein concedes that the administration and the FED leaned too far. The chief anti-inflation hawks, Treasury Secretary William Simon and FED chairman Arthur Burns, promoted a type of "zealotry" that made more moderate policies impossible, Stein now says.

William Felner, another member of the President's economic council until he resigned in February, confirms that the policymakers were willing to risk a recession.

"The feeling was that if we do not get inflation under control," he says, "Then the system is lost." Officials felt that a free enterprise democracy could not survive long with double-digit inflation because "ruthless" government controls on economic activity would have become necessary.

This climate of fear produced not only restrictive budget and monetary policies but also a post-summer Ford proposal for an income-tax increase and a WIN-button campaign. The tax proposal was doomed in Congress from the outset — as administration officials undoubtedly knew-but it helped buy some time to permit the FED's tight-money policy to slow inflation.

Was the recession an accident, or was it made in Washington on purpose? Probably it was some of both. "It was not that Simon and Burns wanted to fill the record books with bad economic numbers, like 9 per cent unemployment," says Arthur Okun of Brookings Institution, who was chief economist under a Democratic President, Lyndon Johnson. "But all the risks were taken on the downside."

Inflation had sown the seeds, and the crusade against inflation had reaped the harvest: the bitter fruit of recession.

PONYTAIL

"...Then she slammed the receiver down in my ear!
I'll never understand women if I live to be THIRTY!"

Wyckoff's Wyckoff Shopper

"The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world". Those words by E.R. Wallace are among the most quoted when we speak about mother . . . and it was Edna Ferber who said . . . simply . . . "Mother knows best." True . . . I won't argue with that . . . nor with Oliver Wendell Holmes, "Youth fades; love droops; the leaves of friendship fall. A mother's secret love outlives them all!"

To Mother With love . . . Sunday! Think about it TODAY; and come to Wyckoff's and find her a romantic robe with a matching nightie in mint green or geranium by Lorraine. In short or long, (and a pajama) they are embellished with embroidery and lace, and make a delightful gift! Our lingerie department is a "veritable bower of beautiful nighties, robes, peggies and brunch coats . . . not to mention delectable slips AND dear little slippers!!"

Suggestion!! Summer IS coming . . . and Monet white summer jewelry has arrived including earrings for pierced earrings; and see the gold-filled lockets and pendants . . . some with cameos that speak of the past and look for all the world like a cherished antique from great grandmother's jewelry box!

Suggestion!! Stationery!! Who could resist the selection of note and letter papers in our stationery dept.? Notes priced from $1.25 . . . letter papers . . . including a delightful new "lap pack" of Williamsburg Herb Garden paper, start at $1.75! Our stationery department has all the bestsellers, too . . . and a book is ALWAYS a welcome gift!!

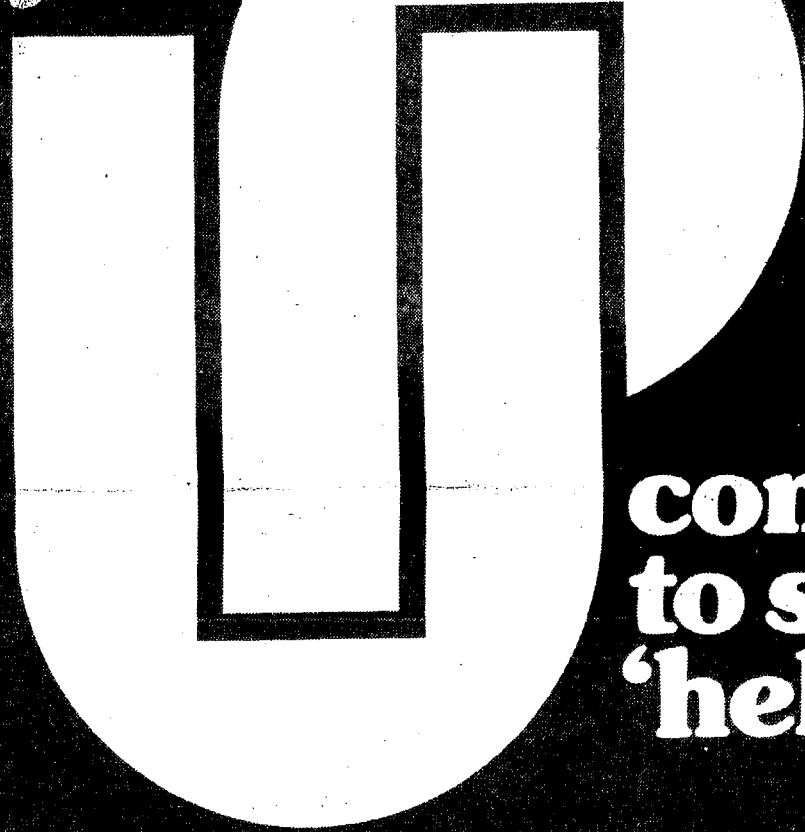

Suggestion!! Bring mother in for supper in the tearoom, tonight . . . let her select her own Butte knit!!!! Our dress department has THE most fabulous selection of Butte knits, and these are the perfect dress for now into summer . . . they "travel" Butte-fully . . . wash like dreams . . . and make you look like the best dressed MOM in town.

Suggestion!! Give her the french fragrance that captures the essence of romance . . . L'Air du Temps by Nina Ricci . . . or one of the items in the new Spring Boutique By Estee Lauder! Divine blue and white camellia packages with spray mist-bath powder, and milk bath, in Youth Dew.

TODAY the cosmetics department IS the center attraction with Suzann Durand of Ultima II on hand all day demonstrating a new makeup for YOU . . . showing you "how-to," AND filling you in on skin care!! TOMORROW . . . Pat Girard will be in the department continuing with more of the same expert advice . . . just in time for Mother's Day!! Coinciding with their visits, Wyckoff's are offering you the perfect Mother's day gift . . . the Frostglass Spray Perfume of Cerissa, Revlon's beautiful new fragrance for only $4.00 with ANY $5.00 selection from the Ultima II Collection!!!

Suggestion!! Remember MOTHER!! An old Yiddish proverb states "God could not be everywhere, so he made Mothers." Come, let us make "remembering her" the happiest of times . . . at Wyckoff's in Stroudsburg! Important P.S. Tomorrow morning . . . for young people ONLY . . . Wyckoff's will open a few selected departments at 8:30 A.M. for their "personal" Mother's Day shopping. Fathers will be treated to coffee and doughnuts in the tearoom. The store will open at 9:30 for our regular customers. This has long been one of the nicest Wyckoff "traditions," and we look forward to serving our young customers with pleasure and anticipation!!

HOW TO GIVE UP A BIG CAR AND NOT SHED A TEAR

It can be done. We replaced some owners' more expensive big cars with our Toyota Mark II. For 3 weeks it was the only car they used. At the end of the test period they agreed: Mark II was as good as...and in some cases far better than...their big cars!

And why not? Mark II is a bit bigger than other Toyotas. It has a strong (and gas saving) 6 cylinder engine. It comes loaded with big-car-type extras: tinted glass, power front disc brakes, reclining bucket seats. All standard. We know it. Mark II is a logical alternative to the big car. Let us show it to you. Stop in and take a luxurious test drive.
